Rat Week in England.
The Dust of Jengis.
Elastic Henry Ford.
When They Steal Enough.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

Copyright, 1927.

THIS is "rat week" in Great Britain, an army of killers, men, ferrets and dogs, are attacking rats throughout the British Islands. Last year in British "rat week", 8,000,000 rats were killed. But scientists say there are 40,000,000 rats in Britain, so killing 8,000,000 won't help much. Forty million rats can easily replace 8,000,000 dead in a year, or even in a month.

IN Britain rats destroy $350,000,000 of property annually. Here they destroy more than twice as much.

Our rats eat from millions of uncovered garbage cans and how many millions there are of them ready at a moment's notice to carry bubonic plague or other disease-bearing fleas, heaven only knows. Cultured American cats probably say to themselves "Oh, to be in England, when 'rat week' is there."

PROF. KOZLOFF, Russian archaeologist, thinks he has discovered the tomb of Jengis Khan, greatest of Asiatic conquerors, who died exactly 700 years ago, after conquering the world from China to Poland and killing 5,000,000 human beings. The dust that is left of him is said to lie peacefully beside his "Second Imperial Concubine" in the Gobi desert.

THAT fierce Asiatic who drove back the power of Islam and of Christianity, directed great battles while he played at chess with his crippled son. Now in peace he lies guarded by seven lamas, each of these priests, every seventh hour, striking seven times a great jade bell hanging over the conqueror's dust.

WHEN they carried Jengis Khan back to the valley of the great desert where he was born, his mourning warriors killed every human being met on the road that his enemies might not get word of his death.

It would interest you to read Jengis' biography, the only one written in English, by Harold Lambe, capable student of Asiatic history.

GETTING ready to produce his new car, including the cost of shutting down, is said to have cost Henry Ford $240,000,000. He spent $50,000,000 for "retooling" his factories, and enlarging the factories. What amazes finance is that Ford has been able to do this without borrowing a dollar. He has carried from $350,000,000 to $400,000,000 cash in banks.

HENRY FORD tells friends that the great expenditure for new tools was not made merely to get ready for the new car. An entire recasting of his manufacturing equipment, will as he puts it, "make me elastic," able to produce anything he wants, without reorganizing, as he has just done.

THOSE who believe that Ford's new car may injure other sound automobile enterprises do not understand the automobile industry, or realize that this country needs, and can absorb, at least 5,000,000 new cars every year.

THE theory that you are safe in America if you steal ENOUGH may be shaken by the trial at Washington of gentlemen accused of stealing the government's oil supply, by bribing the Secretary of the Interior.

The trial has been halted by the judge on evidence as to the "fixing" of jurors.

If it can be shown that money was used to fix jurors in this case, the fixers might go to jail.

HOWEVER, if big thieves can bribe a Secretary of the Interior and escape punishment, even with the Supreme Court officially denouncing their dishonesty, bribing a juror or two may not make much difference.

CONSTANTINOPLE policemen are ordered to shave their long beards and look like Europeans. Zaro Agha, oldest Turkish policeman, past 100, refuses to obey and keeps his whiskers. Age may save him.

When Peter the Great compelled his Russians to cut off their long beards it was as though he had ordered them to cut off their heads. Thousands saved the beards to be buried with them, that they might at the day of judgment prove their respectability.

HENDRIK VAN LOON

FRANCES GOODRICH

AUTHOR'S TRIAL MARRIAGE BARED

The terms upon which the unusual marriage adventure of Hendrik van Loon, author, and Frances Goodrich, actress, is being worked out are as follows:

Neither has assumed the slightest obligation toward the other.

Neither has any claim upon the time, society or affections of the other.

Each maintains a separate establishment, and each is at complete liberty to work out a career without hindrance or advice.

As there is no sharing of the home, there is no sharing of the property or money.

Such association as there may be between them can only be through mutual agreement.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Hendrik Willem Van Loon, eminent philosopher, historian and essayist, is living a new chapter in "the story of mankind."

Experimenter in the laboratory of life, recorder of the lives and loves, joys and sorrows of the great ones of other days, this well-beloved scholar is even now participating in an utterly unique, ultra-modern experiment in marriage. So unique, it is, that it may, indeed, be a precedent for the marriage of the future.

And sharing the adventure with him is the beautiful Frances Goodrich, stage star, university graduate and true leader in feminism.

They had hoped to keep their marriage experiment a secret; but, today, it was learned by the New York American, and is herewith made public for the first time.

Mr. Van Loon maintains himself in "bachelor" apartments at No. 7 East Ninth street, while Miss Goodrich—and she is to be known as Miss Goodrich—has her own apartment at No. 324 East Fifty-seventh street.

2 HUNTERS KILLED, 15 WOUNDED

Death had struck twice today in Western Pennsylvania as hunters invaded the woods and mountains in search of game. Allegheny county had paid toll of one killed and three wounded by gunshot. Fifteen in Western Pennsylvania were wounded by shots meant for rabbits.

THE DEAD:

HAROLD MOORCRAFT, 27, of 2208 Hobson street, Brookline.

SAM BALL, 21, a miner, of Horatio, near Punxsutawney.

THE WOUNDED:

HENRY WEISS, 29, of Tarentum.
JOHN COLEMAN, 52, of Willock.
FRANK ARTNAK, 40, of Broughton.
HOWARD WELLS, 40, of Rochester Mills.
L. E. STIVER, of Big Run.
MRS. LOTTIE SPENCER, 31, of Tidioute.
DEFOREST DONAHUE, of McKean.
ROBERT COULTER, 30, of Irvine.
MICHAEL DOBOSH, 23, of Cairnbrook.
JOHN L. KROUSE, 20, of Bolivar.
C. W. WESTON, of Prospect Park.
WARREN CULBERTSON, of Oil City.
MRS. SOPHIA LOVTRE, of Scottdale.
ELMER J. REILAND, 25, of R. D. 6, Pittsburgh.
RAYMOND ROWE, 29, of Monaca.

Moorcraft's gun was discharged as he tripped over a fence in Elwyn Park, Bethel township.

Ball's body, says a report from Punxsutawney, was found after a posse had searched for him all night.

Mrs. Lovtre was shot while driving in an automobile, when the machine passed in front of hunters shooting at a rabbit.

Widow Is Set Free

Mrs. Eleanor Holby, 32, held by the police in connection with the death of her husband, Joseph Holby, 37, who died of stab wounds October 23 at his home, 1018 Spring Garden avenue, was exonerated of blame by the coroner's jury at the inquest today, when a verdict was returned declaring the man a victim of accident. Mrs. Holby was at once released and joined members of her family. She was near collapse.

PINCHOT'S WIFE EYES SENATE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS,
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Word has reached Washington that a group of Republican women politicians of Pennsylvania are quietly laying plans for having Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the former Pennsylvania Governor, oppose United States Senator David A. Reed for the Republican senatorial nomination in the primaries of the Keystone State next year.

Earlier reports have associated former Gov. Pinchot's name with the senatorial contest, but, so far as is known here, this is the first time Mrs. Pinchot has been mentioned for the post.

At the Pinchot home here today both Mr. Pinchot and Mrs. Pinchot admitted that they have been aware for some time of Mrs. Pinchot's name being used in connection with Senator Reed's ambitions for renomination.

A'S RELEASE COBB

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Ty Cobb will not be with the Philadelphia Athletics next year. This was announced today after an hour's conference between the famous ball player and Connie Mack, manager.

Cobb did not announce his retirement, but told Mack that he thought he might.

SALARY TOO HIGH, MACK SAYS

Mack announced that the Athletic management could not see its way clear to re-engage the great American Leaguer for next year.

"We like Cobb, we like his playing and we would like to have him next year," said Mack.

"We regret that this is not a Sunday baseball town which would give us greater revenue and permit us to retain such a player."

Cobb's reported salary with the Athletics last year was $60,000.

"I am sorry I will not be with the A's next year," said Cobb, when Mack finished talking.

"I enjoyed my stay in Philadelphia, and my relations with the club were very pleasant."

THE WEATHER

Generally fair and colder with light to heavy frost tonight; lowest temperature about 40. Thursday fair.

COOKING SCHOOL GETS CLUBS' AID

The Sun-Telegraph free cooking school, which begins next Tuesday afternoon in Memorial Hall, has been enriched by the co-operation of the Congress of Women's Clubs.

Through its American home department, of which Mrs. E. J. Fairfield is chairman, representative members of the various women's clubs affiliated with the Congress will serve as hostesses at each session of the school.

Mrs. Carl E. Coslowsky, president of the Congress, has promised her assistance as well.

An invitation is extended to all women's clubs and societies to attend the lectures, which are from 2 until 4 o'clock Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons of next week, and 7:30 o'clock Thursday night.

A nationally known food and culinary authority, Mrs. George O. Thurn, is directing the school for the Sun-Telegraph and her program for the week includes new phases of cookery, interesting demonstrations of new kitchen equipment, the preparing of dishes at every lecture and a free question and answer service to the women of Pittsburgh on their housekeeping problems. Mrs. Thurn has addressed thousands of women in clubs and societies and she is extending an urgent invitation to the club women of the Pittsburgh district to attend in groups and bring their daughters, their neighbors and their mothers along with them. PAID TAX FOR GIRLS

WALL STREET CLOSE

AUDIT QUIZ BARES BID FORVOTES

Testimony that tax receipts, prerequisites for voting at the September primary, had been distributed almost indiscriminately to prospective voters was given this morning at Controller C. C. McGovern's inquiry into county finances. Officers and residents of the Athalia Daly Home, a home for working girls, in Gross street, declared that they had received the receipts, although authorizing no one to pay their taxes. Miss Jane McKibben, superintendent, said the package in which 54 receipts had been delivered to the home bore the return address of the "Regular Republican Organization."

LISTED AS HOUSEWIVES

Miss Ada Gass, an attendant, testified the package had been delivered by a mysterious "Mr. Kilkeary" and that the receipts listed the young women as housewives. One receipt, it was testified, was for a minor, another for a girl not assessed, still another for a resident of Somerset county, and several were for girls who already had paid their own taxes.

Existence of a phantom guard for the county paymaster was alleged yesterday in McGovern's probe. The Controller sought in vain to establish the identity of the guard when he quizzed a number of county employes, including James Costella, assistant county treasurer; Robert A. Cain, county paymaster, and John Brown, Jr., assistant cashier in the county treasurer's office. Other than learning that the "guard's" name was Nat Brown, Controller McGovern was stymied in so far as learning whether Nat Brown really existed.

Costella and Cain admitted that the name of Nat Brown had been carried on the county treasurer's payroll last year as a payroll guard. Cain said he understood that a man by the name of Nat Brown was listed on the payroll as a guard, but that Brown never accompanied him and protected the payroll while he visited the various county offices and paid employes.

Costella also admitted that the name Nat Brown was on the payroll, that he had signed Brown's name to a personal identification card and had on numerous occasions signed Brown's name to the payroll. Costella declared that he did not know

OIL MISTRIAL JUROR SEIZED FOR PROBE

By GEORGE E. DURNO,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—The six-year effort of the Federal government to punish Harry F. Sinclair and Albert B. Fall, for an alleged conspiracy to defraud the United States of the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve, resulted today in a mistrial. Edward J. Kidwell, self-styled "yes and no" juror, was taken into custody by deputy United States marshals.

With affidavits before the District of Columbia Supreme Court sustaining charges that the jury had been shadowed by private detectives, and that one juror had expressed prejudice in Sinclair's favor, Federal Judge Siddons brought the notorious case to an abrupt end and remanded the defendants for a new trial.

Kidwell was closeted for more than an hour with the federal grand jury that is investigating the incidents leading up to the mistrial.

Kidwell went into the jury room flanked by a pair of deputy United States marshals, although no charge has been filed against him. After an hour the grand jury recessed for lunch and Kidwell was ordered to re-

AFFIDAVI ON KING RIDDLED

"Thin, unreliable, and poorly done. Director Clark and Supt. Walsh have weakened their position by the use of this woman in this way."

Such is the characterization of the affidavit given to officials of the Public Safety Department by Miss Ruth Parnot, former secretary to W. L. King, bringing grave charges against King and members of the Citizens' League, by the Rev. Dr. J. Alvin Orr, head of the vice-crusading organization.

Dr. Orr's formal statement, given out after noon today, follows:

STATEMENT IN FULL

"On a second reading of the statement given out by Miss Parnot in the office of our superintendent of police, Peter P. Walsh, and in which our director of public safety, Mr. Clark, is said to have had an interest, declaring that it would, if fully given, seriously injure persons prominent in civic life and officers in the Citizens' League, the impression I first got when I read it hurriedly last night, is simply increased.

"It is a thin, unreliable and poorly done job. In fact it is ridiculous. Mr. Walsh and Mr. Clark have only weakened their position by the use of this woman in this way. Why should Supt. Walsh, with Director Clark apparently co-operating, want an affidavit from Miss Parnot?

"And why should Supt. Walsh assure her police protection while she would be in the city?

"Why are our officers of the law concerned in all this poorly-coached story except for the purpose, surely very clumsily attempted, of injuring those who have been uncovering and seeking to root out vice in this city?

"They have surely weakened their position again.

"I have already pointed out a statement without foundation when the first section of this affirmation was given out as to lunch costs for Mr. King and Miss Parnot being paid by the League. The accounts of the League, day by day, show no such charges and it is a gross misrepresentation.

"Here is another manifest misrepresentation. Miss Parnot avers that she had sent letters to League members asking for renewals of subscriptions and that many of these stated they had already made payments.

"The evident answer is that the League was formed in October.

Praises Hearst Paper's Action In Oil Case

By ATLEE POMERENE,

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Mr. Hearst's Washington Herald did a real civic service in bringing this information to government counsel and in the dignified way in which they refrained from publishing the details until submitted to the court.

MISTRIAL IN FALL-SINCLAIR OIL TRIAL IS ORDERED

SEVEN HURT IN WEST END FIRE

All seven victims of the $10,000 fire in the two-story brick building at 413-15 South Main street, West End, late yesterday, were recovering today, according to reports from their homes and hospitals to which they were taken. The blaze started when a spark from a metal scraper ignited naptha in a 200-gallon tank in the plant of the Edgar Hallock Glove Manufacturing Company, occupying the second floor of the building.

The injured are James Kerrigan and Thomas Chronicle, of Engine Company No. 19; Harry Platt, No. 20; William Boyd, No. 19; William Zeppenfeld, No. 19; William Simmons, salvage squad, and Harry Cargo, an employ of the Hallock company.

FALL JURY IS ORDERED DISMISSED

port back for further examination at the [illegible]noon session.

[illegible] TALKED

[illegible] the loose tongue of Kidwell, [illegible]led himself a "good yes and no man," and told of expecting an automobile "as long as a city block" out of Sinclair's acquittal, that brought the trial to a premature close in the one instance. The other was the seizing, in a raid on the Burns Detective Agency headquarters of hour-by-hour reports on the activities of 11 of the 12 men and women in the jury box. These reports, according to the affidavits of the government, had gone into the hands of a Sinclair Oil official.

"It is my belief and I aver," swore Assistant District Attorney Neil Burkinshaw, "that the real employer of said detectives is Harry F. Sinclair, a defendant in this case."

The court after calling attention to the affidavits filed yesterday, dismissed the jury and then ordered the trial adjourned.

Juror Kidwell was taken into custody by deputy United States marshals within a half hour after the mistrial was declared.

TAKEN BEFORE GRAND JURY

Kidwell was halted by the deputies as he tried to leave the Federal Building. He appeared reluctant to accompany them but after they spoke to him a moment, he went along willingly.

The juror was taken immediately to the grand jury room on the third floor of the building.

Neither Fall nor Sinclair would comment on the charge of jury tampering nor on the action of the court in ending the trial. Kidwell, however, was just as reticent at first but later denied the most serious charges.

"I never said that about the car or that Sinclair was a good fellow," said Kidwell. "And I never said anything about an offer being made me. I did talk to Akers and King, but I refuse to talk about the case. They tried to get me drunk. I have known Akers for three years, but I don't know why he tried to get me in bad. That's all I have got to say."

Siddons first spoke of the proceedings yesterday. Then he turned to Juror Kidwell.

"There is one matter I want to call to the attention of Juror Kidwell," said the court. "I want to say to him that two affidavits were filed, one by J. Ray Akers and one by Don Key King, in which appear averments that allege certain statements were made by you. They are part of the record of this court. They are available for you to read at any time, as they are a part of the record of this trial. I will not ask you to make any statement at this time."

KIDWELL FLUSTERED

Other members of the jury stared curiously at Kidwell. Every eye in the courtroom was on the unfortunate juror. His face grew red and he grasped the arms of his chair.

The court then touched upon the action of the attorneys in the secret session yesterday in agreeing that the trial should end as a result of the affidavits.

The court turned again to the jury and said: "I shall have to dismiss the jury and I do so. You are dismissed from further service on the present panel." Thus the first trial of Fall and Sinclair passed into history.

Owen J. Roberts, Government counsel, announced that he would ask the court to set a new trial for Fall and Sinclair for early in January.

Oil Mistrial Costs U. S. $15,000

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Fifteen thousand dollars was lost to the government by the mistrial in the Fall-Sinclair oil conspiracy case, it was estimated today by special oil counsel.

This sum included the cost of bringing here and housing and feeding some 80 witnesses; expenses of stenographers; pay of the jury for 12 days, and the cost of serving subpenas.

QUITS FOR GOOD THIS TIME

After being separated four times, Fannie Friedlander and her husband, Nathan Friedlander, have quit for good, Mrs. Friedlander testified in Common Pleas Court in asking for a divorce. She told Judge Ambrose B. Reid her husband threw dishes at her, struck her frequently, due to gambling and drink. She lives at 1704 Center avenue.

Divorce libels have been filed by Mary Foremsky against Paul Foremsky; Harry E. Weigle against Jennie Weigel; Verner Warren against Myrtle V. Warren; Helen Dexter against William Dexter; Mary E. Mason against Ira B. Mason; Hymie Goldstein against Milton Goldstein; Leo A. Crock against Stella Crock; Elsie Price against Charles Price; Eva N. Reimer against Abraham Reimer; Martha S. DeHaas against Frank DeHaas; Thelma L. Lehnert against Joseph Lehnert; Adeline G. Brown against Addison D. Brown; Edward Bradley against Anne Bradley.

W. R. HARRIS

W. R. Harris, former police lieutenant and prohibition officer, has been reinstated in the city police force from which he was dismissed in 1917. Harris while "under-cover man" for Prohibition Administrator F. C. Baird was arrested in a bribe conspiracy in Scranton, was later acquitted and soon after left the prohibition enforcement service.

Girl Flees After Shots

A mystery shooting in which neither the young man who fired the shot nor his intended victim, said to have been a pretty girl about 20 years old, are known, confronted North Side police today.

The first shot was fired, police learned, at St. Luke's square and Lafayette avenue. Two brothers, E. G. and J. D. Moffatt, of 2216 Perrysville avenue, heard the shots and ran out in time to see a man, gun in hand, running down Cutler street and a hysterical girl, clothed in brown, standing at a nearby corner. They pursued the man, but were halted when he turned and opened fire on them.

When they returned, the girl had been picked up by Edward Schimmel, of 962 Beck's Run road, who was passing in his machine. Police learned from him that the girl had asked she be taken to Alpine avenue and Federal street. He left her there, he said, but did not learn her name or address.

Residence In E. End Bombed

Black Hand activities were blamed by police today for the attempted bombing of the home of Dominick Trozzo at 3914 Elgin avenue, East End, shortly after midnight. It was the second attempt to bomb the home in two years.

The explosive, police learned, was thrown from an old Ford automobile. It failed to reach its mark, exploding on the curb where it tore a small hole and shattered windows in the home of Harold Brietstien, at 3910 Elgin avenue.

The bomb thrower lost his hat as he stood in the moving automobile and this, bearing the intials "J. P." was found in the roadway.

No one was injured.

STOCK STOLEN IN STREET

Two Negroes held up James Conroy, of 905 Arch street, in Hazel street this morning and robbed him of 1,004 shares of stock worth about $10,000, according to his report to police.

FISHES LOST WATCH FROM YOUGHIOGHENY

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 2.—A watch he lost in the Youghiogheny River while walking across a bridge following a Hallowe'en celebration here was recovered Tuesday by George Livingstone, unaffected by its 24 hours in the water. The watch was clearly visible under three feet of water in the daylight and Livingstone was able to "fish" it up.

COOKING SCHOOL GETS NEW AID

Girl Scouts have been invited to submit their favorite camp recipes and to consult the lecturer about planning appropriate menus for their camp and hike luncheons. Mrs. Thurn does not feel that the women of Pittsburgh have to be taught to cook but she knows that housekeepers everywhere are interested in new ideas on homemaking. "Any woman who has to plan three meals every day every day in the year is on the lookout for new recipes and I know there are some new things about cookery in next week's lectures," she said while discussing plans for the free cooking school.

The range of subjects covered in the week's lectures will touch on the most important phases of cookery and homemaking. But in order to offer as complete a service as possible, Mrs. Thurn invites her audience of housekeepers to ask questions about the demonstrations or the lectures or about any cookery problems or homemaking situation with which they are confronted.

Her familiarity with marketing conditions all over the country has given her many interesting as well as helpful facts about how and what to buy for the family. She believes that the day of the old-fashioned housekeeper who didn't know what she was going to have for supper until supper time arrived, is gone. Modern efficiency has come into the kitchen not only to save the housekeeper many weary hours and tired arms and legs, but to insure more careful marketing, better shopping at the grocery store and better menu planning. She points out that the woman who is trying to improve her shopping and kitchen working habits is going to plan better meals and cook better dishes. All of this makes for a happier and better household. "Efficiency," formerly a word only mentioned around large business concerns, has become the housekeeper's righthand tool.

Mrs. Thurn will not tell housekeepers to build themselves new kitchens, but she will point out the best arrangement for kitchens, suggest the essential and most useful equipment and tell women how to make the most of their kitchens and the tools in them. New appliances of many kinds are already in the kitchen and installed in Memorial Hall for next week's school.

A discussion of some phase of cookery will be included in every lecture and some new and especially delicious dishes will be prepared in the Memorial Hall kitchen. These will be given to the audience and there will be printed copies of the recipes distributed through the audience. Local department stores, dealers in appliances and grocers are co-operating to make the kitchen and the cooking demonstrations as interesting as possible. There will be a musical program to open each day's lecture and every lecture is free to all who want admission.

Car Hits 2 Autos, 1 Hurt

Two automobiles were wrecked when a machine was rammed by a street car at Frankstown and Penn avenues today, and Harry E. Schwartz, of 5441 Jackson street, driver of one, suffered serious internal injuries. Traffic was tied up 30 minutes. Street car passengers, shaken up, escaped uninjured.

Schwartz, proprietor of a shoe store at 6229 Frankstown avenue, was driving to visit his wife, ill in a hospital. His car, struck by a city-bound Frankstown avenue car, hit a machine, owned by W. D. Shank, of 316 Castle Shannon road, Mt. Lebanon, and Shank's car, pushed across the sidewalk, knocked down a large advertising clock which, in falling, endangered the display window of a shoe store. Schwartz was taken to the Pittsburgh Hospital.

FAYETTE-GREENE BRIDGE TOLLS EXCEED $35,000

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Nov. 2.—Toll receipts from the Fayette-Greene county bridge at Masontown from January 1 to October 1 amounted to $35,232.45, of which Greene county gets 42 per cent and Fayette county the balance. Daily average receipts during September were $156.29 and during August $167.61.

Looter on Brink of Death

Discovered looting two houses at 70 and 71 Crescent street shortly before noon today, an unidentified white man, about 25, had a narrow escape from death when the truck in which he attempted to make his getaway crashed through a wooden railing and hung suspended by an oil plug in the crankcase 75 feet above Bigelow boulevard. The robber escaped.

Residents of the district told police he broke into the house owned by Charles Henke, 70 Crescent street, first. He smashed windows and doors and loaded his loot into the truck. Then he turned his attention to the house adjoining and piled up much loot there. Both houses have been unoccupied and the booty consisted mainly of old household articles and furniture.

When residents called police, the man backed his truck up Crescent street to a place he thought wide enough to turn around and while attempting to head the other direction he lost control and the machine plunged through the wooden rail.

The oil plug, projecting about a half inch from the bottom of the crankcase, imbedded itself in the wooden boardwalk and kept the heavy machine from crashing to the boulevard. Motorcycle officers in the boulevard stood guards while the machine was being removed, lest it slip over the hill and injure someone.

BROCKWAY R. R. STATION SAFE BLOWN AND ROBBED

CONSTABLE ARRESTED FOR NOT USING WARRANT

CONWAY, Pa., Nov. 2.—For attempting to enter a home in Baden and make an arrest without a warrant, Constable Howard Rader, Conway, will be arraigned tonight before Justice David Stewart, Beaver, on a charge of trespass. He was arrested by state troopers.

S. S. POLICE CAPTAIN IS SUSPENDED

A 30-day suspension was the penalty imposed by the police trial board today on Capt. Alfred Bassett, of the Fifth police district, South Side, for jeopardizing the life of a critically injured man by routing him from his bed and holding him in a cell in the South Side station.

Charges were preferred through Police Inspector John J. McArdle by McNeal Chisholm, of 412 Freedland street, in behalf of his brother, William Chisholm, of 636 Warrington avenue. William Chisholm had suffered a fractured skull in an automobile crash October 13. Bassett, despite protests, took him from bed to a cell and to Traffic Court. Bassett declared he believed the man intoxicated.

where Brown was at present. He has not been employed by the county since last year.

"Wasn't it a joke in the treasurer's office about Nat Brown, the payroll guard?" the Controller asked Cain.

"The name of Brown was discussed at different times but I can't say the men joked about him," the paymaster replied.

Controller McGovern brought out in questioning John Brown, assistant cashier, that the address of Nat Brown was known in the treasurer's office as 341 Enfield street. This is the address of the cashier. He said Nat Brown never lived with him, although mail for Nat Brown was delivered to his home.

MRS. PINCHOT MAY RUN

but both declined to comment. They joined in the non-committal reply that "there's nothing to say about it." Specifically they declined either to deny or confirm the report that Mrs. Pinchot is being groomed for the contest.

The former Keystone State executive and Mrs. Pinchot came to Washington several days back to take up their residence for the winter. At the time former Gov. Pinchot was asked about his plans for seeking the seat of Senator Reed, but stated that he had nothing to say on the subject. The character of his reply then as well as now might reasonably be interpreted as meaning that one or the other of them may be found in a favorable frame of mind to oppose Senator Reed if circumstances are propitious at a later date.

Should Mrs. Pinchot decide to make the race she would be one of the few of her sex to aspire for the upper house of Congress since national suffrage was granted women. Mrs. Jeanette Rankin, former Congressman from Montana, was the first to try, but was defeated. Only one woman has graced the Senate chamber, Mrs. Rebecca L. Felton, of Georgia, who served for a single day in 1922 under an appointment by former Gov. Hardwick to fill an unexpired term of the late Senator Thomas E. Watson.

The Pinchot attack on Senator Reed would be aimed indirectly at Secretary of the Treasury A. W. Mellon.

Few opportunities have been overlooked by the Pinchots to assail what the former Governor has characterized as "Mellonism" and the "Pittsburgh influence."

STREET CONDUIT BLAST BURNS THREE WORKMEN

No serious damage resulted from the gas explosion in a conduit in Kirkwood street, near Highland avenue, yesterday, according to a report of the Duquesne Light Company today. Patsy Monaci, of 6327 Everett street, one of three employes burned, is in the Pittsburgh Hospital, but it was said his condition is not serious. The accident occurred when gas, leaking into the conduit, was ignited.

NEW CASTLE COUNCIL MOVES TO BOOST PAY

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Nov. 2.—Ordinances increasing the Mayor's salary from $2,500 to $3,600 a year; the City Controller from $2,000 to $3,000, and councilmen from $2,000 to $3,600 were introduced yesterday before city council.

DENIES COUNTY WORKERS PAID TO TESTIFY

"No county employe has been paid, will be paid or promised payment on account of the investigation of the taxpayers committee of Allegheny county," said Henry O. Evans today, replying to a statement made by Controller C. C. McGovern when he subpenaed the members of the committee to appear before him tomorrow. As one of his reasons for summoning the committee, McGovern said he understood that a county employe was being paid to furnish information.

Joseph Stadtfeld has resigned as a member of the committee, giving as his reason the fact that The Sun-Telegraph, in printing the list, identified him as president of the Allegheny County Bar Association. "Publication of that fact was absolutely unwarranted," he said. "As it would necessarily reflect upon the Bar Association, which has no connection directly or indirectly with politics, I felt obliged to withdraw from the committee." Mr. Evans, confirming Mr. Stadtfeld's resignation, said: "The committee regrets the unfortunate addition of the title, president of the Bar Association, to the name of Mr. Stadtfeld and, while we think the addition of this designation a perfectly natural thing, we recognize the embarrassment it caused Mr. Stadtfeld and agree he is wise in withdrawing from the committee."

While all the members of the committee are serving as private citizens and taxpayers, The Sun-Telegraph, in its exclusive story, identified not only Mr. Stadtfeld, but every member of the committee for its readers.

Jail Bird "Kicks" His Way to Liberty

BALTIMORE, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Charles Sturrup has grumbled his way out of the Maryland House of Correction.

Officials, in announcing his parole for deportation to England, said he found his fellow prisoners "beastly boors," his mashed potatoes lumpy and his hours impossible.

They described him as a "grumbler, growler, a trouble maker, a disorganizer and a kicker," and said other prisoners were becoming like him.

He was given a sentence of four years in 1924 on a charge of false representation.

BRANDS REED'S SPEECH 'BOSH'

"Bosh" was the term applied to Senator David A. Reed's political speech at Republican headquarters by Dr. Frank C. Ferrante, of Coraopolis, speaking today at the McGovern-Shields noon meeting.

"The Senator's chief claim to fame is that a year or so ago he succeeded in popularizing the almost forgotten word 'dunderheads,'" said the speaker. "He makes the local commissioner fight a national question and succeeds in keeping a straight face while he does it. If the Republican leaders at Washington want Babcock and Armstrong rather than McGovern and Shields, if they need secret accounts and bogus accounting rather than honesty and plain dealing, if they wish to sanction ballot box stuffing, vote stealing, political corruption and violence, let them come to Allegheny county and say so, and I for one will be a Democrat."

A $136,000 estate is disposed of in the will of James M. Camp, 6951 Willard street, filed for probate today. Fifty thousand dollars is left to a nephew, William H. Camp, and the balance in trust to the widow and a sister, Agnes D. Camp.

WOMAN ROBBED BY SLUGGER

TRAILS, THEN GRABS HER

Knocked down by a thug while walking in Ridge avenue about midnight, Mrs. Eleanore Meissner, 29, of 1101 Ridge avenue, was robbed of her pocketbook containing a platinum wedding ring and $36.

Mrs. Meissner told police she could not tell whether her assailant was a Negro or was masked. She said he followed her from Pennsylvania avenue, where she had been visiting an aunt, but she did not think he would molest her.

Holding his left arm across his face, the man swung his right fist into the woman's face and as she fell screaming, he grabbed her pocketbook and ran. A night watchman from a nearby manufacturing plant, attracted to the scene by her cries, called police, who searched the district, but found no trace of the slugger, who, police believe, may be the same man who has molested many women here.

"DADDY" BROWNING -:- IN SOCIETY AGAIN -:- BUT JUST TO DANCE

SHE MADE HIM LIKE IT

WAY BACK WHEN

There was a time when "Daddy" Browning could dance any evening with his "Peaches" like this. Now he dances every evening with a different girl each time. But, alas! They're "only girls" to him.

NOW SHE MAKES IT PAY

PROFITABLE, TOO

Right from her big deed and lease man to the cabaret floor went "Peaches." With her partner, as you see above, she raked in the big shiny dollars that can never quite take the place of romance in the heart of an affectionate girl. By dancing every night she could buy her own honking ganders, if she wanted to.

NO DANCES WITH MARY

FORGOTTEN

Forgotten for the most part by a fickle public Mary Spas goes on her way as an humble janitor's daughter. She never danced with "Daddy," but she started his long dance down the white lane of publicity when mistakes about her age set off a spark of inquiry that lit a bonfire of court action.

"MARY SUNSHINE"

"Mary Sunshine," the first child whom the real estate and Page One man adopted, is his only idol now, he announced in a statement to his public yesterday. She is shown here with her nurse shortly before the "Peaches" suit.

WOMAN'S AFFIDAVIT ON KING CONTRADICTED

Members of the League joined for one year and paid for the year.

"Miss Parnot was discharged in April. It is evident that no renewals were due and could not have been asked for.

"The evidence of mismanagement of finances at this point breaks down entirely, and is what might be said of all such references.

"SIMPLAY STENOGRAPHER"

"As to the finances of the League, Miss Parnot knew little or nothing. She was employed simply as a stenographer and in no sense as an assistant director or assistant treasurer.

"The finances of the League are in proper condition and properly accounted for.

"It seems to us that Supt. Walsh, in order to hide his own dereliction, is endeavoring to throw mud into the faces of decent and useful citizens.

"It is, to our mind, almost a crime for Director Clark, who is in office for the promotion of good government and suppression of vice, to take any part in such misrepresentation.

"Let it be clearly stated again that the purpose of the League is to uncover vice and bring about the conviction and lodging of responsibility wherever it belongs.

"We are going straight down the road in the prosecution of the cases which will be in court in less than three weeks."

Clark said today that Walsh deliberately disobeyed him when he released the affidavit for publication yesterday.

The affidavit is a lengthy question-and-answer amplification of advance excerpts of the story told Supt. Walsh by Miss Ruth Parnot.

The Rev. Dr. D. E. Cruea, local superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, proved to be one of the "prominent persons" whose names Supt. Walsh said he was protecting when he refused at first to reveal the details of the affidavit.

Several of the persons named either denied even knowing Miss Parnot or declared the affidavit contained misstatements of fact.

CRUEA DENIES

Indignant when he learned that he was the person who had told Miss Parnot that "kissing and hugging was all right," even when indulged in by unmarried persons, and suggested the marriage of Miss Parnot and King, Dr. Cruea made a statement in which he declares the conversation Miss Parnot referred to had taken place in the presence of Dr. Cruea's 15-year-old son, and for that reason obviously would not have been of the nature referred to in the affidavit. His statement follows:

"I never met her. I never saw her."

That was the answer today of R. G. Dorrance, vice president and treasurer of Brown-Dorrance Company, to the statement of Ruth Parnot that he was present at a conversation between her and William L. King.

There are one or two things about the affidavit which puzzle Miss Parnot's former landlady, Mrs. Adolph Alexander, who lives with her husband and baby in a modest, spotless home at 340 Denniston avenue.

"She was all right," Mrs. Alexander explained. "She minded her own business and mostly stayed home at nights. Sundays she'd go to church and then maybe for a walk. But—"

Miss Parnot swore in her affidavit that she and King had dinner in her room once and that she asked Mr. Alexander's permission, with the provision that she leave the door of her room open.

"Here"—Mrs. Alexander nodded toward the front door as a tall, rugged man walked in—"is my husband."

"No," Alexander affirmed, "she never asked me about it."

"Who was this other roomer, Ford, who is mentioned in the affidavit. Did he ever say, loud enough for Miss Parnot to hear, that King was bringing his 'sweetie Rachel' here from Wyoming so that Miss Parnot would leave?

"Mr. Ford was a pretty old man and he lived with his wife here. They weren't even on the same floor as Miss Parnell. Why, I don't think he knew her. I never saw him talking with her. They left here a long time ago—in March, I think—for Canada and they aren't coming back," said Mrs. Alexander.

"Mrs. Alexander, did you know Officer Carr, whom Miss Parnot mentioned as an acquaintance?" she was asked.

Mrs. Alexander answered negatively with a shake of the head.

G. Brown Hill, a member of the executive committee of the Citizens' League, said Miss Parnot's affidavit had not shaken his faith in King.

"I am not saying anything against her character," he added. "Her statement is the product of a mind that is not normal—a mind afflicted with unbalanced imagination. Those who were in daily contact with her during her stay here will tell you she suffered from hallucinations. She imagined all kinds of things; she would come in in the morning and report the most unthinkable things.

"I have had the finest opinion of King's character and ability, his honesty and integrity, and I can't comprehend that he has done anything wrong. The only thing that makes me a little bit leary is that I cannot reconcile, with my summing up of his character, his absence and failure to communicate with Dr. Orr. He has been gone for a month and during that time we have heard nothing from him except his telephone conversation with Dr. Cruea."

William E. Schoyer, treasurer of the Citizens' League, whose name crops up several times in the affidavit of Ruth Parnot, answered her statements by requesting inquirers to "see Dr. Orr."

The affidavit in question is in the form of an interview with Miss Parnot by Supt. Walsh. It contains enough material to fill four newspaper columns. In the opinion of Citizens' League officials, the interview was "cooked up" beforehand.

Miss Parnot tells of coming to Pittsburgh at an expense of $200 to take the league secretary job; of first becoming dissatisfied when she found the league's financial matters not being handled in a business-like manner; of general inefficiency in the conduct of the league office by King, and finally of quitting because King was forcing his attentions upon her. In her explanation of the latter charge she said King wanted her to share an apartment with him, insisted she lunch with him "on the league's expense account," attend theaters, and that he visited her apartment.

"TRAILED," SHE SAYS

Miss Parnot charges that Dr. Cruea suggested she and King marry and that she refused to consider the proposition on the ground that the man she would marry must "first of all be a gentleman." She also told of seeking the protection of a policeman, referred to as "Officer Carr," to protect her from Citizens' League detectives, who, she said, trailed her after she had disagreements with King.

In one answer she tells of quitting the league in disgust, but later laments that "they put me out on the streets of Pittsburgh without knowing whether I had railroad fare home."

In answer to one of Supt. Walsh's questions Miss Parnot states: "I came to Pittsburgh on my own volition," and then she declares she insisted on police protection before she would promise to come.

Officials of the League refused to discuss apparent discrepancies in the statement, saying they "did not wish to dignify it that much."

"We will talk in court," was Dr. Orr's final comment.

TWO ARRESTED AFTER BEATING GROCER

Jacob Schaner, 35, was beaten into an unconscious condition in his grocery store, 345 Virginia avenue, Mt. Washington, yesterday by two men. His wife, Mrs. Stella Schaner, who witnessed the beating, after firing two shots at her husband's assailants, was overpowered.

After the battle Harold E. Wolfe, 28, 157 Virginia avenue, and William McCullough, of 423 Natchez street, were arrested when they entered the Mt. Washington Police Station with the gun they had take nfrom Mrs. Schaner. They had come to ask the arrest of Schaner and his wife.

Lieut. John McFarland, in company with the two men, went to the grocery and found Schaner unconscious on the floor. He was taken to the South Side Hospital where he was treated for cuts on the head.

After hearing Wolfe's story, in which he accused Schaner of making insulting remarks concerning Wolfe's wife, and after a large quantity of moonshine was discovered in the store, Lieut. McFarland also arrested Schaner and his wife.

CONDUCTOR'S TIP LEADS TO JURY FIXING CHARGES

JROR NO. 11 TALKS IN PUBLIC

the following signed article, Don- A. King, staff reporter of the hington Herald, recites in dra- style the circumstances which put him on the trail of the al- jury tamperers in the Fall- lair conspiracy case and led to sensational breaking up of the which may result in indictments ose said to have attempted to in- nce the jury through the use of ey.

By DONALD A. KING.
ff Reporter of The Washington Herald.

yright, 1927, by Universal Service and the Washington Herald.)

ASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—In a din- "soft drink parlor" at 411 Four- a-Half street, S. W., Edward Kid- 31-year-old leather worker, the enth man chosen to sit in judg- on Albert B. Fall and Harry F. air, spent two hours last Satur- afternoon in conversation with writer which set the Teapot bub- furiously again, and blew the off.

t in so many words did Kidwell his intention to "hang" the oil although it has been reported in the same place the evening aturday, October 22, he made a ment to the effect that it would ore to his advantage to vote for quittal than for a conviction.

course," was the reply. "What "

rd a juror say so," the voice d, when pressed for the source f information.

essed for some substantiation of startling charge, he named Eddie Kidwell as the juror, then the speaker was revealed as J. R. Akers.

After considerable haggling, the writer made an appointment to meet Akers Saturday morning.

Eventually, Akers agreed to take the writer to this "soft drink parlor" where the juror had been holding forth. As we passed through those old familiar swinging doors to dim coolness, the latter waved a hand to Kidwell, lounging nearby, inviting him in for a drink.

While refreshments were being dispensed, Akers launched his attack upon Kidwell, as it had been agreed that the writer was in no position to ask questions.

"You're a fine bird to be sitting on a jury," charged Akers. "You know you couldn't conscientiously find anybody else guilty of anything."

Kidwell laughed, and protested a clean record.

"Why, you ought to get at least $150,000 or $200,000 out of that case," continued Akers.

"Well, Sinclair's got plenty of money," replied the wise Mr. Kidwell. "That's nothing to a man like him. There's no limit to how high a crowd like that could go."

"And here I am slaving along for a bare living," Akers commented, bitterly. "What're you going to do for me when you get yours?"

"Don't you worry. I'll fix you up, all right," Kidwell gave assurance, as he hooked thumbs in vest in that old complacement gesture and leaned nonchantly back against the bar.

"I suppose you'll be riding around in a big car, soon," was the next challenge.

"Well, if I don't get one about as long as this block I'll feel kind of disappointed," was Kidwell's reply.

The juror was high in his praise of Sinclair.

In strolled a man named Boss, one-time manager of a chain grocery store. For a moment he listened to the blurting Kidwell, then warned him sharply that he was talking too much and had better "keep his mouth shut."

"I'm not discussing the issues in the case," Kidwell argued.

"Well, you're talking too much, anyway," Boss asserted. "And I, for one, don't think much of what you are saying. If I were on a jury I'd give what I believed to be a true verdict. If a man was guilty and it had been proven, I'd convict him, no matter who he was, or how rich he was!"

The talk then turned on the Fall-Doheny trial and that startling acquittal.

Boss expressed the belief that jurors in that trial had been rewarded. Kidwell agreed that they probably had, and smiled.

It was mentioned by Kidwell, next, that he was receiving $5 a day as his fee for jury duty. He opined that it was "easy money" because he "wasn't listening a whole lot to what was going on in court." To evidence that it was costing the government many thousands of dollars to produce Kidwell was not paying much attention, he asserted.

Shortly thereafter the group broke up.

VAN LOON AND WIFE

him, the author-philosopher yesterday told of the experiment, adding:

"And it is an experiment.

"If it works out this way, well and good. If it doesn't, well—

"We'll try it some other way!"

Wholly naive is this big, good-natured Dutchman, speaking in rumbling gutturals, and he seems rather bewildered over it all.

They were married, he says, in New Jersey. He doesn't remember the name of the town, nor the exact date. He is—and he smiles deprecatingly—very, very bad at remembering dates.

He is quite sure the marriage took place, however, because the ceremony was performed by his good friend, Rabbi Lewis Brown. Strange that he, a Dutchman, and a Christian girl should be married by a Jewish rabbi?

Not a bit of it. He is his friend, is this Brown, a very good friend, indeed, and it is best to be married by one of one's friends.

He speaks:

"It was only after three years of misgivings that we finally decided to enter upon this personal experiment.

"We were married, yes—for one must accept the large conventionalities or justly experience the scorn of one's fellow men."

He strives vainly to recall the date of that marriage, saying:

"Ah, but I cannot remember! I am very, very bad at dates. See—" His arm sweeps the room.

"I have books, hundreds of books, reference books, because I cannot remember dates. I remember the date of my birth, yes—because it is the same date upon which I was naturalized, and it used to be old Russian New Year. Why—"

And he chuckled.

"Only last week I was in Cleveland autographing books at a store. I autographed about 60—and do you know in one I wrote the wrong day, the wrong month and the wrong year!

"But let me get back to this marriage. It was before a judge and, an hour after it was over, we were back in New York—she, my wife, was back on the stage, and I was back here in my study working.

"Why were we married in New Jersey? Because my wife was born there. It is a town of factories and chimneys, and she asked me if I could imagine it as her birthplace. I told her I could not imagine so beautiful a being originating in such surroundings.

"And so it goes. Once a week, maybe oftener, maybe less often, I telephone to her.

"I say: 'How would you like to have dinner with me?' If she says 'Yes,' we go some place and dine. But, maybe, she has another engagement. Then I say: "Well, all right. But how are you? Are you well?" And she says: 'Yes, I am well—and you?'

"And that's the way it is.

"She has her own home, her own circle of friends, and I have mine—and there is no conflict there.

"She has her own money. I have mine.

"So far we have been very happy. Well, why not?

"Here we are: Two mature people, working out our own experiment. We are educated. We think we know.

"I am 45. My wife is 30—30—30—oh, I don't know how old she is—but she knows."

He became very quiet, very serious as he continued:

"For six years she was a good wife, at the beck and call of her husband. And that smashed up."

"IF NOT—WELL!"

"Now she has worked clear back to freedom and that freedom cannot be sacrificed.

"I repeat: It is our personal experiment with marriage. If it works out well, we will continue to be happy. If not, well—

"We'll try something else."

An amusing incident presaged the interview. The author lunched with Will Durant, author of "The History of Philosophy." Said Van Loon:

"At that luncheon we promised each other that we would no longer exploit ourselves.

"We solemnly swore, and clasped hands on it, that we would never again make a statement for the press, and, now—

"This thing had to come up!"

Mr. Van Loon, whose best-known work is, perhaps, "The Story of Mankind," has been journalist, university professor and historian. He was born in Holland on January 14, 1882, and came to America early in life. He graduated from Cornell in 1905; and since, has adapted himself to various endeavors. Of late he has concentrated on writing.

He was twice married before, first to the former Eliza Bowditch of Boston and to the former Helen Criswell.

Miss Goodrich is the former wife of Robert Ames, the actor, whom she divorced in 1923. She has appeared in many stage successes, including "Come Out Of The Kitchen"—a title curiously appropriate for the type of marriage she has now contracted.

Said Van Loon, in conclusion:

"We are happy, very happy—and we expect to remain so.

"Will you stay to tea? No? Well—

"Be kind to us . . . "

Will Boosts Ante on Bill in His New Society

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Nov. 2.—Mayor Bill Thompson of Chicago has started a society called "America First." You send $10 to defray the expenses of trying to keep it first. Bill has the nucleus of a good idea, but like any good idea, it's the improvements that make it. So I hereby offer stock in a society called "America Only" at $20 a share. Why be only first? Let's be the whole thing. Why spend $10 to be in front when $10 more will put you in front, behind and in the middle, all at the same time? If everybody in America will give me $20 I will be more than glad to show them where we are the "only nation in the world." Besides, this money will not all revert to me. A small percentage will be spent in exterminating all other nations. Who'll be the first to display super-patriotism and join "America Only?"

His despair turned to joy
When painful skin trouble is healed after resisting many treatments

East Haven, Conn., March 17:—"I work at Electro Plating and have what is known as "Platers' trouble." Every Plater gets it more or less, but I am unfortunate enough to get it all over my body from my head to my feet. My skin just opened up into a million and one deep cuts, from which ran a nasty watery fluid. I suffered tortures even after many different treatments. I was very much discouraged for some time and had about given up all hope of ever being healed when I tried your Resinol Soap and Ointment. I immediately began to get better and today my face and the tender parts of my body are entirely healed without even a scar. I'll boost Resinol every chance I get and I wish everybody suffering from skin trouble, especially that caused by Electro Plating, would give it a fair trial." (Signed) Samuel J. Dykes, 303 Laurel St.

An Exhibition of

At Pittsburgh's Largest and Best Stocked Linen Store

THIS exhibition displays the finest and most beautiful of Horne linens. They are selected from our regular stocks, and include bed linens, fine table damasks and decorative linens.

The handiwork of many countries contributes to this showing—Ireland, Scotland, France, Italy, Belgium, Madeira Islands, Spain, Czecho-Slovakia and Germany.

Historical Display

In connection with this exhibition we are showing a number of historic specimens of Royal Hand-Woven Linen Damasks. Some of them date back as far as 1760. There are among them pieces woven for Queen Victoria, Queen Alexandra, Baron Fitzmaurice and the Duke of Manchester.

First Presentation in Pittsburgh of Royal Linen Damasks

Hand-woven Irish linen damasks, made for years only for royalty and nobility, and now offered for sale for the first time locally. Three patterns of historic interest and beauty are presented in the Linen Shop.

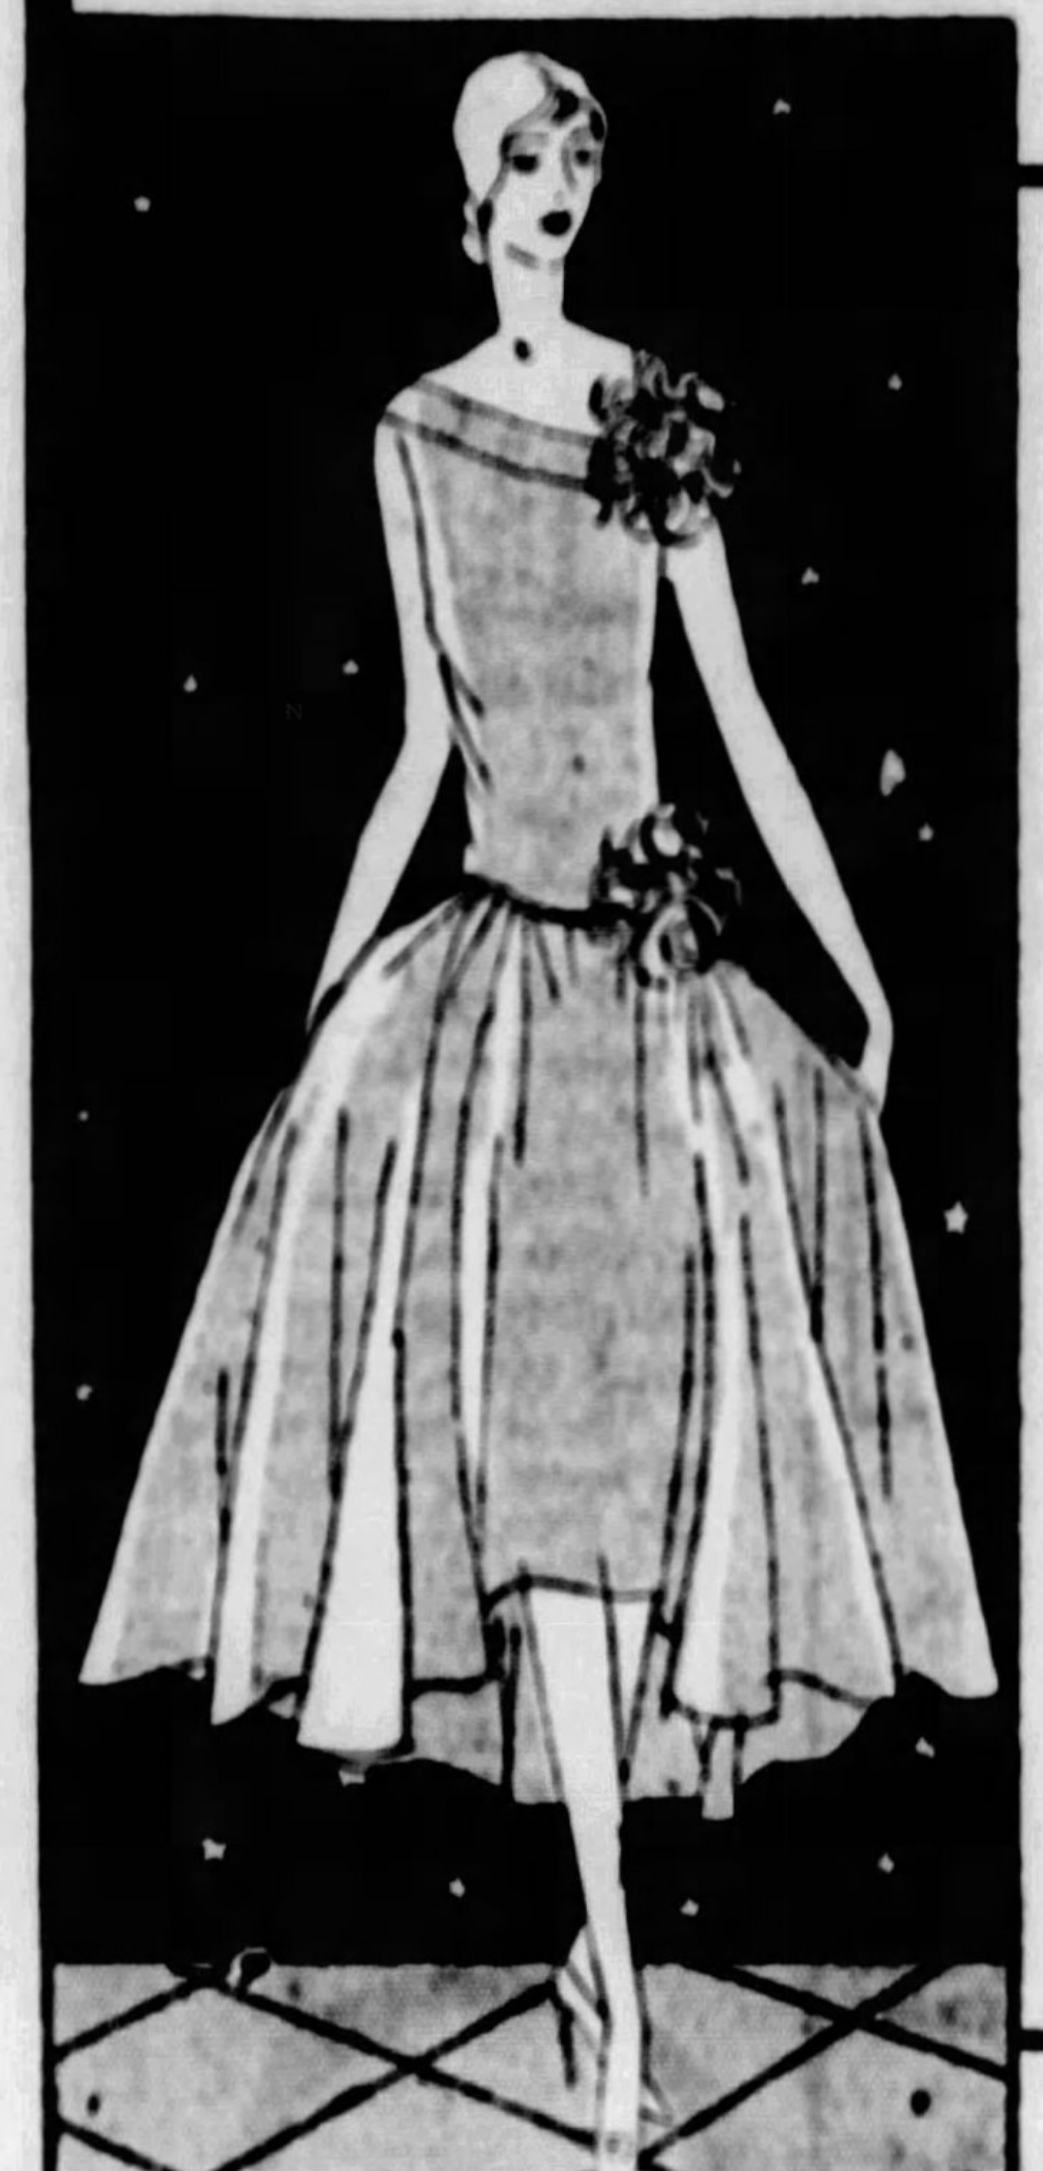
The Evening Trio

In Misses' Modes

THE three types of evening gowns which have been created for Youth are presented here. The adoption of each depends upon the type of wearer, upon her social life, and upon the simplicity or the formality of the occasion. (Second Floor.)



The

Robe de Style

The gown to wear at a formal function, when the picture quality of dress is desired to accentuate one's individuality.

To be had in velvet, satin, taffeta, moire, tulle. $39.50 to $150.00.

The

Brilliant Gown

Always so eloquent of Paris, which is the source of the beaded gowns in our present misses' collection.

Simply or intricately beaded with crystals or colored beads. Of georgette crepe in white and colors. $49.50 to $125.00.

The

Simple Gown

The logical choice when one evening frock must go to many parties, also adopted by the young woman whose evening gown is always simple in contrast to her vivid personality.

Of chiffon, velvet, satin, georgette. $39.50 to $85.00.

The

Slippers

All fashion authorities agree on the importance of color in evening footwear. . . . "With white, silvery or neutral-tone dresses, slippers are vivid green, flame, blue, or other striking shade. With pastel gowns, the slippers usually strike a deeper note in the same color scale. Sometimes they are in the same shade." . . . "Gold and silver brocades in very small patterns, on a white ground which is to be dyed to match the gown." . . . "High color satin slippers with black evening gowns."

Slippers Dyed

—giving twenty-four hours' service, without charge, on slippers purchased here. Satin Slippers, $12.50.

Metal Brocade Slippers with a white design, $10.00.

Metal Brocade and Plain Metal Kid Slippers, $10.00 and $12.50.

—Horne's, Second Floor—

The

Wraps

The Misses' Shop presents wraps of velvet in lovely, soft or vivid shades, or black, also of metal brocades. Flatteringly trimmed with hare fur in black or white, $65.00 to $195.00.

—Horne's, Second Floor—

Chanel's New

Crystal Jewelry

Discs of diamond-like brilliance—scintillant! Our quantity is limited because of the great demand and the difficulty in manufacturing. Necklaces, pins, bracelets, $1.50 to $20.00.

—Horne's, Main Floor—

Metal Cloths

The new spirit of elegance in their richness—the new spirit of femininity in their soft, pliable quality.

They're being incorporated into smart winter wardrobes in many different forms—as afternoon blouses and evening gowns and wraps, especially. And they are presented at Horne's in a most complete collection, including dull ones and bright ones, dark ones, and light ones....in many different qualities at many different prices, from $2.00 to $27.50.

Black Transparent Velvet Special, $8.00 Yd.

The finest, silkiest quality of transparent velvet we have. A limited number of yards in black only at this price. 39 inches wide.

—Horne's, Main Floor—

Dinnerware, 20% Less

All open-stock and 100-piece sets at this discount for a limited time. (Lenox China is the only exception).

This includes fine domestic and imported Dinnerware, such as English, French, Bavarian and Austrian Chinas and porcelains. From the open-stock patterns you may select pieces to fill in, or make up an entire new set.

—Horne's, Fifth Floor—

Colorful Gift Pillows

The daintiest of Boudoir Pillows to heap upon a chaise longue or bed, of Arabian lace silk lined, in several colors, $2.50 each.

Organdie Petal Pillows are round, oval and oblong and also designed for the boudoir. They combine lovely pastel colors. $3.50 and $3.75 each.

Handsome Cushions for the davenport, of figured damask in two-tone gold, rose and mulberry shades, are backed with plain color velvet. Taffeta Cushions are shirred and ruffled and have an applique motif in the center. They come in changeable and plain colors, $3.50 each.

Square box-shaped Cushions are of satin with quilted top, $3.50 each.

—Horne's, Fourth Floor—

Sterling Silver Gifts

Gift pieces of sterling silver, useful and moderately priced.

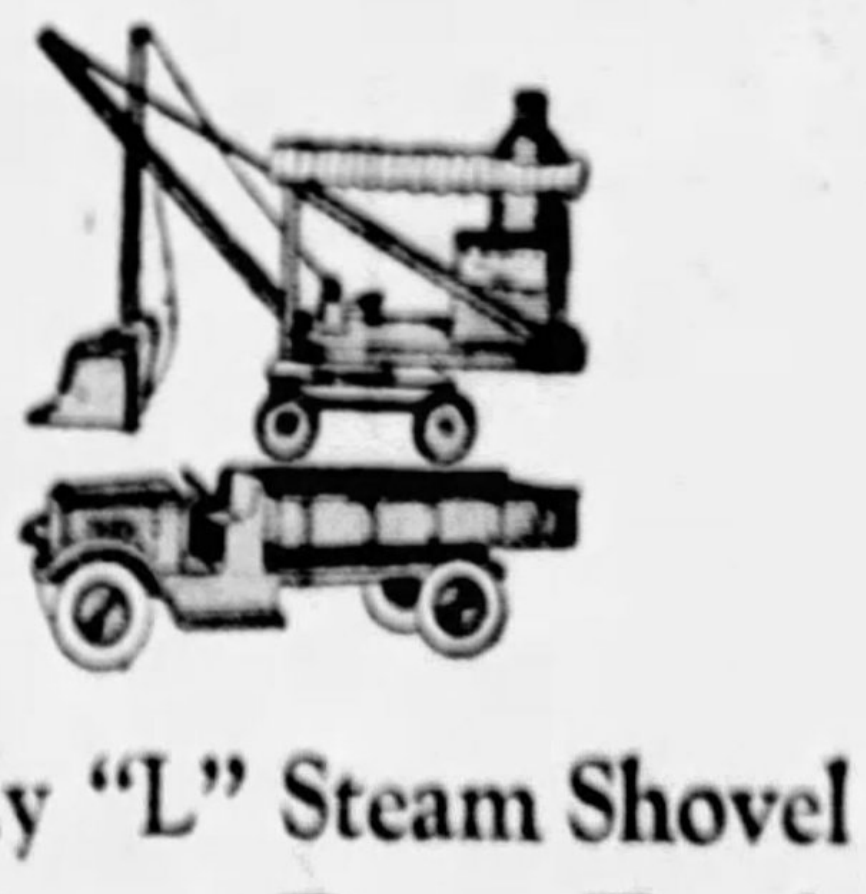
Ice Skates and Shoes

Duquesne Garden opens the ice skating season Friday night. Men's and Women's Hockey Skates of aluminum, with steel blade—the lightest-weight skates made. Fitted with black calf laced-to-toe high shoe, well reinforced over instep. Complete, $10.50.

—Horne's, Third Floor—



Buddy "L" Steam Shovel and Son-ny Dump Truck

$2.95 each

Toys for regular boys! Made of steel strong enough to hold a man's weight, and painted shiny black and red.

Steam shovel has excavating bucket which opens automatically, and the dump truck has real rubber tires.

The low price suggests a set of two, $5.90

HOW TO KEEP WELL

Fear, an Evil Spirit That Ruins Health

IT is a temptation to devote this column to a reproduction of letters I receive. They come by the thousand. Some of them are sad, some ar. glad, but all are interesting.

A few days ago I had a letter signed, "Only a Woman." The writer made a bitter attack on doctors because they "keep people ill from fear." She thinks medical men put fear into human hearts.

DR COPELAND

In the letter is an interesting statement that "the mind is the workshop of evil." In many instances this is true as gospel. If we could control the mind we would make out of many an unhappy, miserable, emaciated and broken person a smiling, plump and healthy individual. Instead, we have a mind full of apprehension, crushing to death all the impulses for good and for useful service.

My correspondent recites the case of a woman of 22, "who died of old age, wrinkled and decrepit, from disappointment and worry. The paper gave her picture, 'before and after' her great shock and sorrow. Fear made that person old."

I fully agree with "Only a Woman."

By the way, dear lady, being "Only a Woman" is no small honor. Born and bred a Protestant, I have always respected the Roman Catholics for their adoration of Mary, the Mother of God. She was "only a woman," it is true, but it was her blessed privilege to give the highest possible expression to her womanhood, by becoming a mother, the mother of the Lord Jesus Christ.

To me, my friend, being "Only a Woman" is the highest recommendation that could be given. Had your letter been signed "Queen Marie," or "Princess Ileana," it could mean no more to me than your signature, "Only a Woman."

But let me return to our theme! Fear is the most common, the most debilitating, the worst of all the afflictions that can come to a human being. If one of us permits the mind to be governed by fear, it has indeed become a "workshop of evil."

Fear drives away sleep, it dulls the appetite, it clogs the circulation, it poisons the blood, it saps the vitality, it beclouds the mind, it destroys the usefulness of its victim. In its presence can be no clear thinking, no effective work, no health and vigor.

Instead of a mind filled with constructive and uplifting thoughts, it has become a mind that has hurrying through its corridors all sorts of evil spirits. It is indeed the home of evil. Ill health and premature age are the inevitable results.

There is a question which is sometimes difficult to answer: Which came first—the abnormal body, or the diseased mind? The doctors think the weakened body has much to do with the state of mind. My correspondent does not think so—she believes that fear is responsible for the bodily state.

Upon this we cannot agree, of course. But we can agree that the closer we conform to nature's rules of right living the better it is for us. By caring for the temple of the soul we are promoting our happiness and sense of well being. The sound body is likely to house a sane mind.

WHAT'S THE ANSWER?

1. Who wrote "The Procurator of Judaea"?
2. What kind of rock is woven into cloth, and why?
3. Who were the Guelphs and Ghibellines?
4. What is necromancy?
5. What is the Phi Beta Kappa Society?
6. What is the heaviest substance known?
7. Why do soldiers break step when crossing a bridge?
8. What was "Jacob's Ladder"?
9. What were the two theaters in London for which Shakespeare wrote exclusively?
10. What is the official language of Brazil?

The answers to these questions may be found in tomorrow's paper.

Here are the answers to yesterday's questions.

1. The Three Wise Men were: Balthasar, Gaspar and Melchior.
2. Alphonse Bertillon devised a system of identification based on body measurements.
3. An eisteddfod is a congress of Welsh bards.
4. Rene Le Sage wrote "Gil Blas."
5. Kashmir is in northern India.
6. An edict of a pope is a papal bull.
7. The Diesel engine, invented in 1900, is a type of internal combustion motor made to burn heavy oils.
8. A hole made in one stroke less than par is called a birdie.
9. Lucy Stone is famous for advocating the retention of their maiden names by married women.
10. The "Toreador Song" is sung in "Carmen."

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

Thursday, November 3

[illegible] must borrow nothing from [illegible]. —Proverb.

T[illegible] this day, according to the lunar and mutual [illegible]figuration, encourages a degree of temerity in business, with the financial prospects well-bolstered up by a friendly Jupiter, who also brings his benefits into personal affairs, expanding and prospering.

While new contracts and agreements may be negotiated, yet it would be well to be on guard against loopholes for fraud or misunderstandings. Idealism reigns in heart affairs.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of progress and financial increase, with new business and fresh contracts, but they should leave no opening for disputes or misrepresentation. Heart and home affairs also flourish and are imbued with a tinge of idealism and restraint.

A child born on this day should be versatile, ambitious and progressive, reaching advanced position in life through its talents. In personal relations it may be restrained and idealistic. Veracity and integrity should be instilled.

Notable Nativity: Lewis Waller, actor.

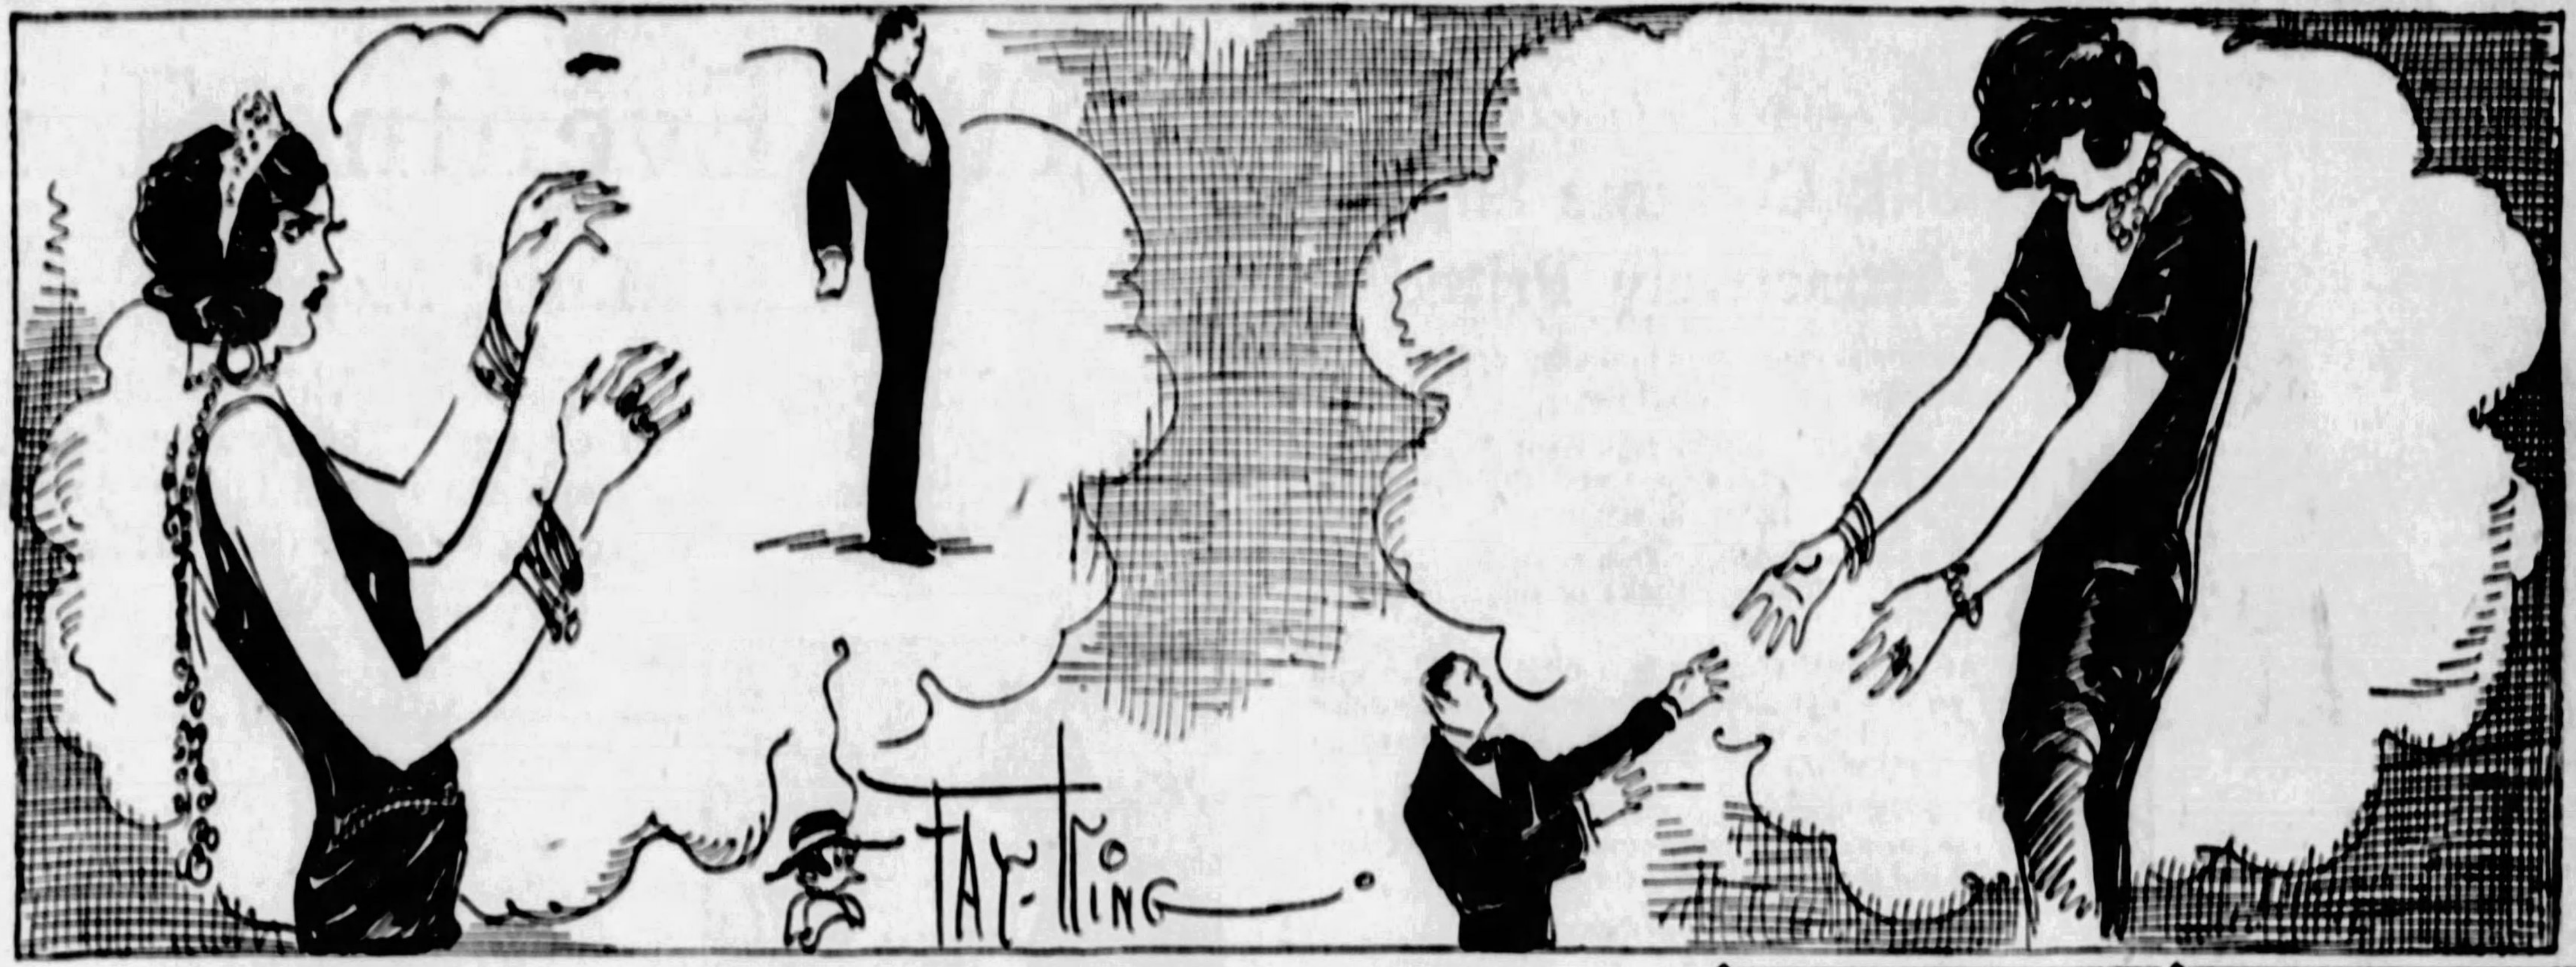
End Oily, Sallow Skin

A little Calonite powder sprinkled on a wet cloth and rubbed gently over the face each night ends shiny, oily skins—puts new life into sallow skin, and cleans the pores of all dust, dirt and prevents blackheads. It makes the skin feel refreshed and bright, so you will enjoy a good night's rest.

Fay King Contrasts Women Attacking Ideals



By FAY KING.

WOMEN may be divided into two groups:
Those who build.
Those who destroy.

Those who build are the "saints" on earth. Those who destroy are the spoilers. Both are to be found in all walks of life.

The one devotes her life to lifting, inspiring, reaching down into the depths and raising those who are helpless back to the highroad of hope again.

Whether these women live in a palace or work in a factory, their noble influence leaves the world a better place for their having lived.

The spoilers delight in destroying. They have neither the capacity nor the character to accomplish any good. Their only distinction in life is the satisfaction they get in destroying good work.

They remind me of the man who in ancient times burned a beautiful temple. When asked the motive of his deed, he said he wanted to go down in history. Not being able to do a notable, worthy thing, he sought fame by doing an unworthy one.

These women who delight in destroying ideals and happy homes and breaking down the influence of a wife or mother in a man's worthy career, are like the man who burned the temple.

Often their only distinction in life is the destruction they have accomplished, and that would have no distinction except when contrasted with the good work of those before them.

It takes mind and heart and soul and character to build.

Ants and worms can undermine a temple, but they cannot build another!

SAYINGS OF MRS. SOLOMON

By HELEN ROWLAND

EVERY WIFE HAS HER DAY

MY DAUGHTER, what are the happiest days of a Married Woman's life?

Go to. Are they sweetest and most satisfying while her husband is young and ardent and full of zest?

Nay, verily! For then doth fear clutch at her heart, whensoever another woman casteth eyes upon him! Then doth she sit up until morning, awaiting his return from the stag party and the lodge meeting. Then is she filled with doubt and misgiving, whensoever he is ten minutes late!

Then doth she study her mirror with trembling lest the glamour of her beauty may have faded overnight. Yea, then is she tormented lest every thought within his mind and every beat of his heart be NOT for her alone. And all her days are wondering—and all her dreams are nightmares!

But when his girth and his years have increased, and the middle button of his waistcoat refuseth to stay fastened; when he letteth his belt out another notch with every season—

When he doeth his daily dozen with hopefulness, ardor and religious regularity, and refuseth the second cocktail and the second potato with an air of virtuous martyrdom—

Then, ah then, doth the heart of his wife rejoice! Then doth she float in her happiness and delight!

Then doth she cease from weepings and worryings and questionings!

Then may her Beloved go wheresoever he listeth, and remain away as long as it pleaseth him!

For the Mark of the DOMESTICATED MAN is upon him, and he is no longer a danger and a temptation to women!

And these, my Daughter, are the sweetest and most satisfying days of a Married Woman's life!

For then all her days are peace and tranquility and all her nights are pleasant slumber. And she feareth NO woman. For her Beloved is, at last, a Flat Tire!

Safety first—guard THE DANGER LINE

THOUSANDS suffer needlessly from tooth decay, from gum infections and from the dangerous illnesses these conditions bring about.

The reason is that merely brushing the teeth is not enough. For acids, the most dangerous cause of tooth decay and gum irritations, form in the crevices at The Danger Line, where no tooth-brush can reach.

Squibb's Dental Cream brings protection. It contains more than 50% of Squibb's Milk of Magnesia—enough to neutralize the acids at The Danger Line and elsewhere. Whenever you use Squibb's, tiny particles of Milk of Magnesia are forced into every pit and crevice where acids form. There they remain to safeguard your teeth and gums afterwards. On sale at all druggists—40 a large tube.

UNIQUE LACING ADJUSTS BELT AS FIGURE IMPROVES
SURGICALLOY STAY Truly Lifts

The Armmori Belt is the wedding of Science and Fashion in a most remarkable foundation garment.

The Armmori Belt is neither a corset nor a girdle but an entirely new idea combining style and health.

Don't become resigned to the idea that your figure is naturally lacking in modishness—that styles are made for other women. Every figure including yours, has a natural grace. The Armmori restores the precise Venus-like grace which you seek.

PATENTED ARMOR-LASTIC BANDS

Not until Armor-Lastic was invented, was the Armmori Belt possible. Armor-Lastic is an elastic webbing that can be washed and boiled. Armor-Lastic bands enable the Armmori to lift and support the sagging abdominal muscles. Smart youthful lines-stylish contour—free, graceful movements, are the reward!

Special Demonstrations This Week.
Kaufmann's
Boggs & Buhl
Kaufmann & Baer Co. and Rosenbaum Co.

The Armmori Belt is known to reduce the abdomen hip girth 2 to 3 inches immediately. As the muscles strengthen, further reduction follows. It is not the Armmori that does this reducing. The Armmori lifts and supports. Nature then reduces.

FASHION DEMANDS ARMMORI

The Armmori Belt was created for physicians and its widely recommended in cases of Obesity, Ptosis (sagging abdomen) Hernia, Pregnency, Post Operative use, etc. So closely allied to health and style, and so remarkably corrective did the Armmori prove to be, that style leaders here and abroad demanded the Armmori as the most successful means of moulding the figure curves which the VERY LATEST fashion demands.

MOST ECONOMICAL GARMENT

Figure out what you spend in a year's time on the cheapest foundation garments available. Then realize that one Armmori Belt can be worn and washed for that entire year. In flesh coutil the Armmori costs $6.50 or $7.50 and in very fine brocade it is $10. Women who have worn the Armmori say that the youthful contour and bouyant feeling which it brings is worth more than money can buy. But even on the basis of VALUE alone, there is nothing comparable to the Armmori.

LIKE "ARMOUR"-LOVE

No matter what your figure is now, the minute you try on the Armmori Health Belt, you and your friends will begin to notice the difference in your posture and general appearance—a difference that becomes more striking and more favorable every day you wear this belt. It is fitting for the name "Armmori" to be pronounced like "Armour" the French for "love". You WILL love your Armmori Belt.

Estelle Taylor Ends Rumors That She Has Left Films by Signing For Lead in "The Whip Woman"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
(Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.)

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 2.

ESTELLE TAYLOR has very effectively put a stop to the many rumors that she had left the screen for a life of domesticity by signing a contract with Robert Kane to play the feminine lead in "The Whip Woman." For almost a year Estelle, who is regarded as one of the most finished actresses on the screen, hasn't made a picture, principally because she was under contract to United Artists and they never had a story they considered suitable for her talents.

This long absence, following her role as Lucretia Borgia in "Don Juan," is one of the things that is difficult to understand even in Hollywood, where motion picture idosyncrasies are always accepted as a part of the game. Then came Miss Taylor's long illness, with her husband, Jack Dempsey, insisting that she dismiss pictures from her mind until she had entirely recovered her health.

The test made by James C. Boyle, the director, of Estelle as the Russian peasant girl heroine of Forrest Halsey's original story, "The Whip Woman," shows that Miss Taylor has never looked better. In fact, after seeing the test, Robert Kane telegraphed Richard Rowland, general manager of First National, and told him the part was made for Estelle. And when Estelle "long-distanced" Jack to tell him that she had signed the contract, Jack said: "Okay, honey"—so all is well.

Everyone looked for Bessie Love at the Mayfair Club dance Saturday night. Bessie is one of the most regular attendants at these parties and it didn't seem right not to see her—all the film world was represented. There was a reason for her absence—she was getting ready on a few hours' notice to go to New York and play the lead in "Anybody Seen Kelly," a Universal comedy. Bessie just returned from Manhattan, but she isn't the type to refuse to turn right around and go right back when it means a good job.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has its own polo field and maybe you don't think it's being patronized. Sanford Hewitt, who was the instructor of the polo team at Yale University for three years and coach of the freshman team there for two years, was engaged to teach Billy Haines how to play polo for his next picture. But don't think for a moment Mr. Hewitt is confining his activities to Billy. All the other G-M-G stars are taking lessons. Polo, out here, bids fair to be as popular as swimming, or tennis. Agnes Christine Johnstone is practicing to enter a woman's contest given by the women's polo team. Her husband, Frank Dazey, is one of the most popular members of the Santa Monica polo crowd. Most of us are willing to try it if they give us a "nag" that is blind in one eye and can't see so very well out of the other.

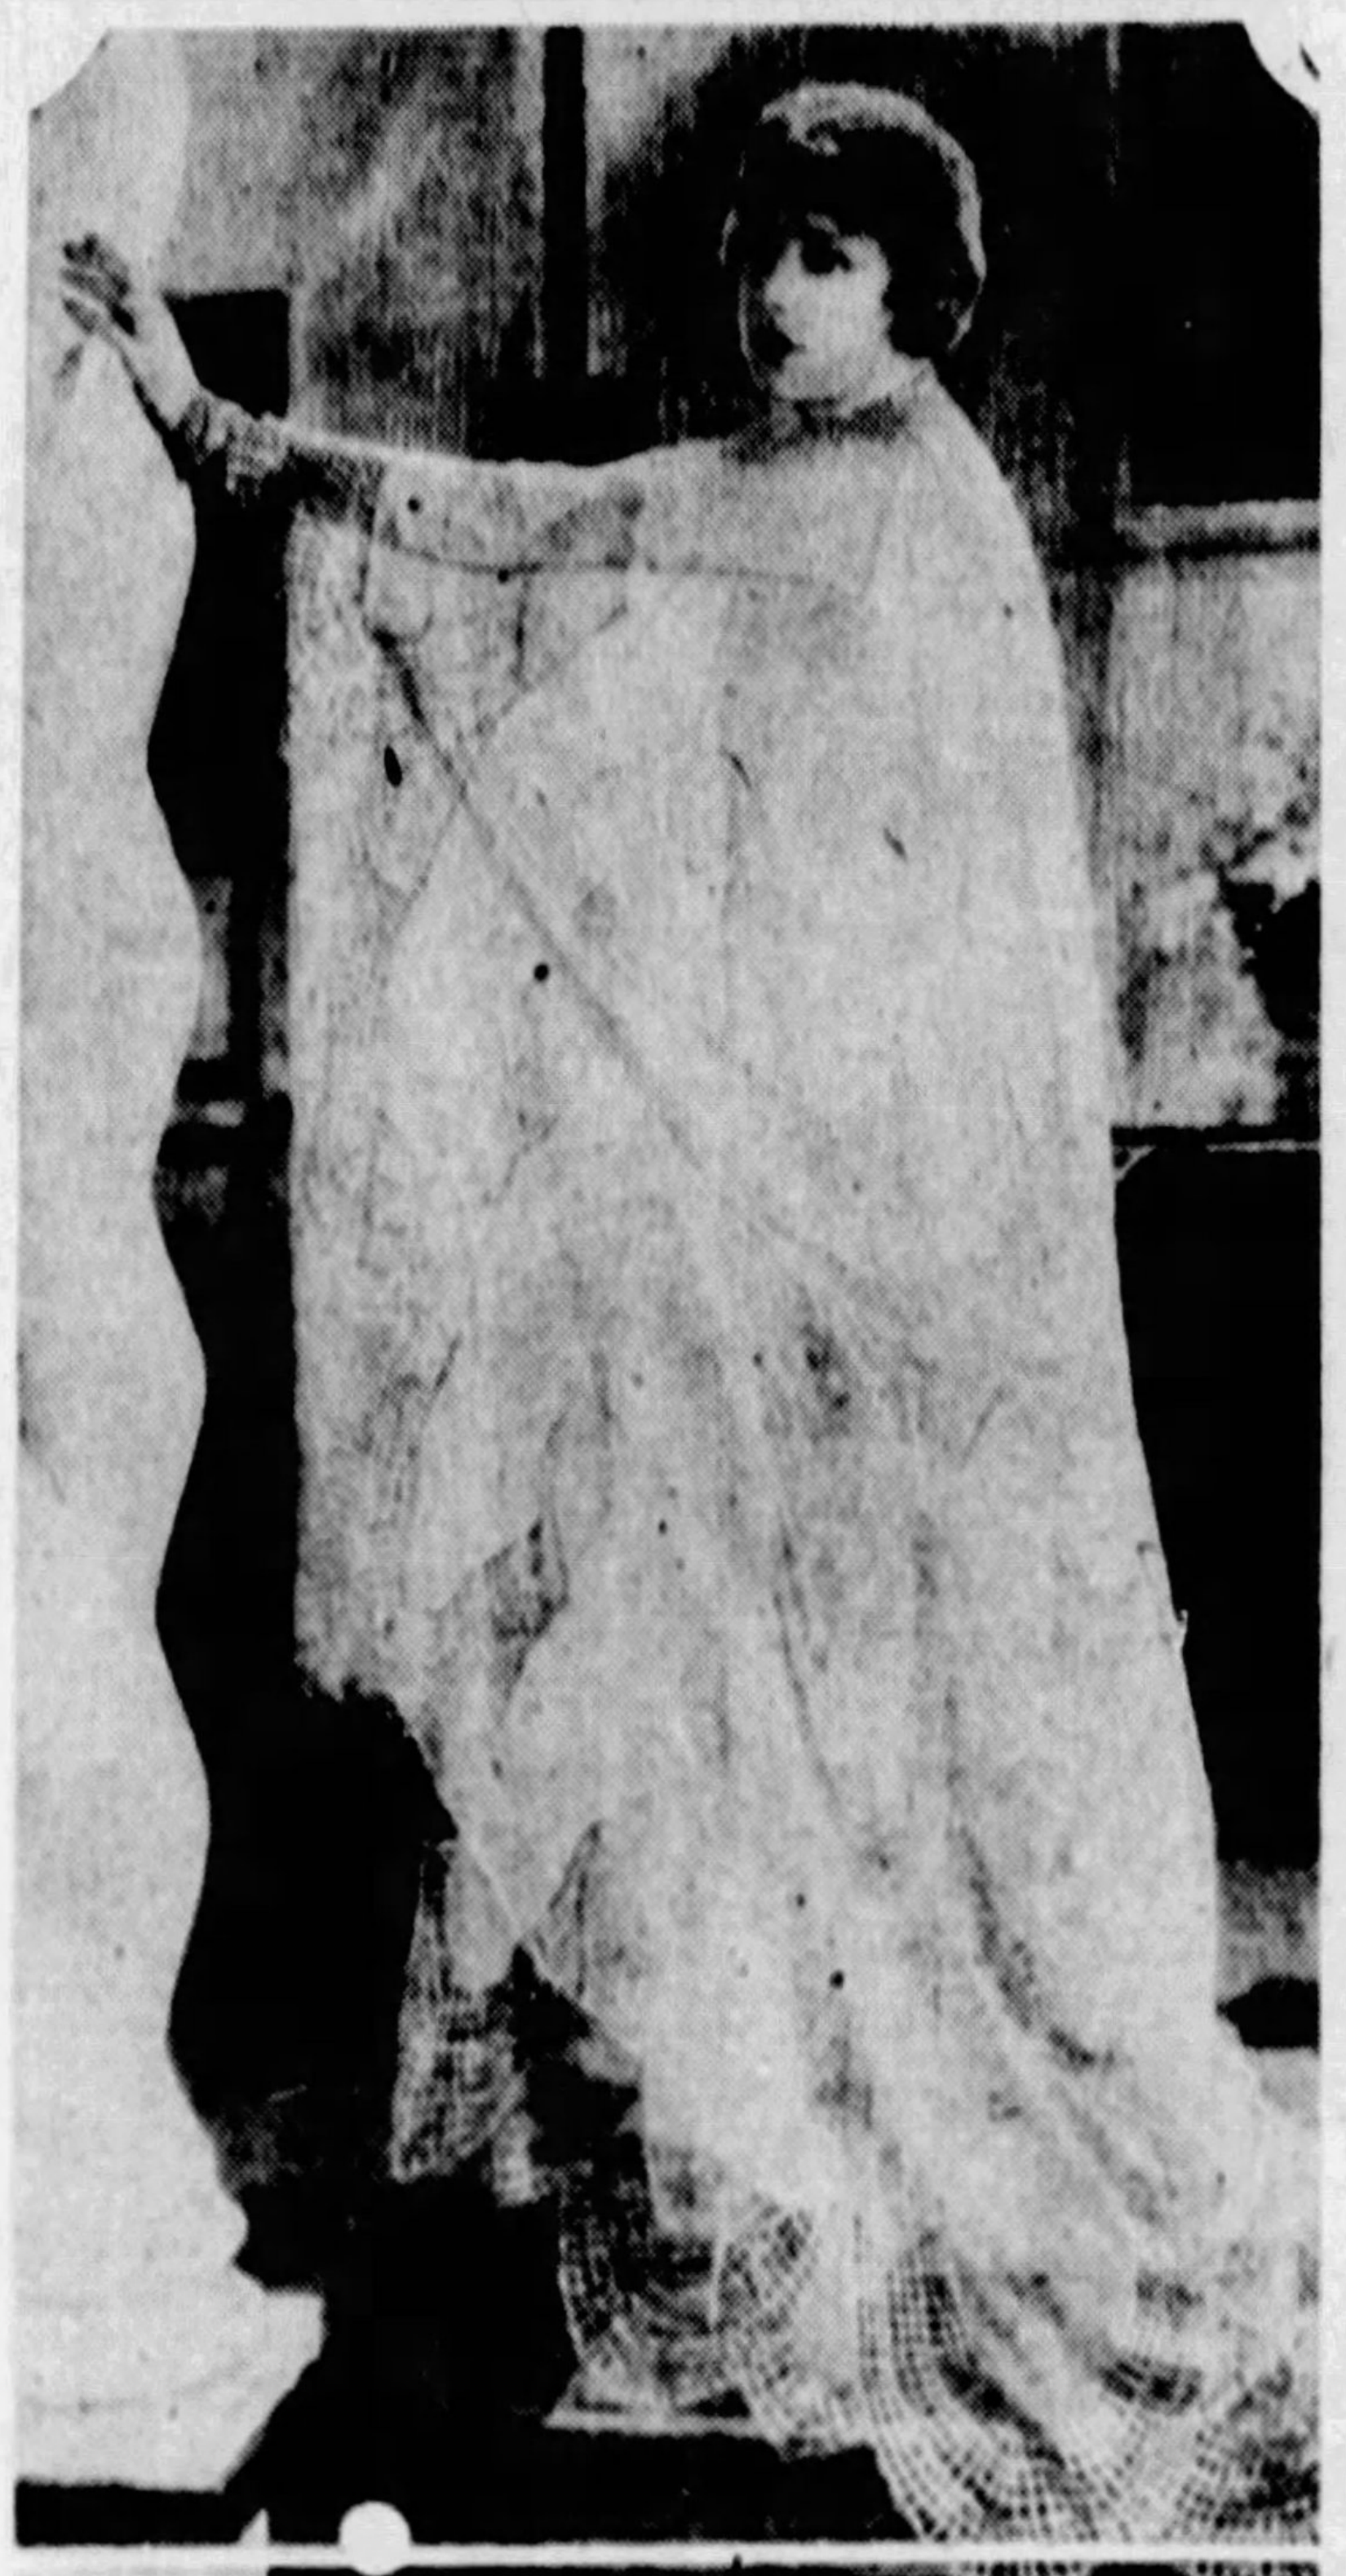
There isn't a screen actress in Hollywood who has a more consistent following than Priscilla Dean, who first started making friends among the fans when she played in Universal Pictures. Letters come in to this desk every day asking when and where Miss Dean can be seen. I am pleased to give that information through this column. She has been signed to play opposite Charlie Chase in his next comedy, which James Parrott will direct. All I know about it is that it has a theatrical atmosphere and Leo McCarey will lend a supervising eye on its progress.

The "flu" is on a rampage in Hollywood. Bebe Daniels, who was stricken a week ago, remains a very sick girl, and yesterday Warner Brothers had to replace Helene Costello in "Across the Pacific," Monte Blue's picture. Miss Costello, who was signed for the part, was taken sick with the flu or something very closely akin to it, and since production waits for no man or woman, Warners did considerable scurrying around to find a leading lady. Edna Murphy, who had planned to take a few weeks off to buy her trousseau, finally agreed to help out and take Miss Costello's place.

The Chinese children will have cause to rise up and call Gilda Gray their patron saint. The proceeds from her picture, "The Devil Dancer," which has its world's premier at the Million Dollar Theater here tonight, will be turned over to equipping the play grounds of the Chinese children. Gilda will do her stuff in prologue. Gil Boat, Miss Gray's business manager and husband, is one of the best showmen in the business. He has been able to sell Gilda Gray as a motion picture actress on the strength of her talent as a dancer and moreover her pictures have made money wherever they have been shown, simply because he has arranged for her to put in a personal appearance along with the showing of the film. They claim at the Goldwyn studios they have a good picture in "The Devil Dancer." I haven't seen it yet, so I don't know whether they are prejudiced or not.

Anatole France is to live again in the movies. Edward Connelly has been selected for the part in "The Divine Woman," Greta Garbo's picture, now being filmed at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. I don't remember that Anatole France, before he died, ever said anything for or against the movies. Unlike George Bernard Shaw, who bursts forth in print with some splendid article every few weeks and usually dignifies the movies by mentioning them, Anatole France never had anything to say on the silent drama. It would be interesting if he were still living to get his opinion on this particular characterization.

In Her First Movie



JEANNE EAGELS wears this frilly butterfly's dream and a moth's conception of nothing to eat in her first movie, "Man, Woman and Sin," in which she plays opposite John Gilbert.

MARION TALLEY SINGS TONIGHT IN SYRIA MOSQUE

Marion Talley will be heard tonight in Syria Mosque where she gives the second concert in the May Beegle series. Miss Talley will include arias from operas in which she has appeared since her first appearance here a year and a half ago. Her latest appearance was in the opera, "Mignon," and she will be heard in the polonaise, "I'm Fair Titania," and also from the opera "Traviata," the aria "Ah, Fors' E Lui" and "Sempre Libera." A group of English songs, and the Strauss-LaForge arrangement of "Beautiful Blue Danube" will be included in her program. John Corigliano, violinist, will be the assisting artist.

KIBBLER'S ORCHESTRA TO PLAY IN SANDERS

The largest dance orchestra to play in Sanders, on Freeport highway, Aspinwall, will appear there Saturday night, when Gordon Kibbler brings his recording orchestra here for his first Pittsburgh appearance. Seventeen musicians make up the Kibbler orchestra, it is announced. It will offer novelties in dance specialties by individual members of the orchestra.

George Fawcett In Russian Story

George Fawcett has been added to the cast of "Tempest," John Barrymore's next starring production for United Artists. Fawcett will play the role of an elderly army officer in this story of the Russian revolution, which Slav Tourjansky is directing.

Others who have been engaged for important roles are Vera Veronia, Louis Wilheim and Ullrich Haupt. In "Tempest" Barrymore appears as a subaltern in the famous Russian Imperial Dragoons of pre-revolutionary days.

Theme of Youth Dominates Screen

By Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 2.—The usual flutter and stimulated excitement that precede the filming of every Cecil De Mille production is now swaying the De Mille studios in Culver City. Young girls in endless procession visit the studios with the vain hope that they may be the girl in "The Godless Girl," now definitely set as the title of this next personally directed De Mille production. Youth is the keynote of "The Godless Girl." High school children of the impressionable age will be featured.

Ernest Pascal, well known author, has been co-working with Jeanie MacPherson on the story, which goes into production November 15. With a scant two weeks of time ahead, the principals will be chosen almost any day now.

Youth is easily the most popular subject in Hollywood today. F. W. Murnan, just back from Germany, says that there will be no older people in "The Four Devils." He, too, will specialize on youth. This younger generation with its foibles, its virtues and its needs laid bare to a dissecting world, is a subject that is like flying, full of enormous possibilities.

Jeanne Eagles Is Coming in New Play

The seat sale for the engagement of Jeanne Eagles, who was last seen here in "Rain," in her new play, "Her Cardboard Lover," in the Pitt next week, will begin tomorrow morning. "Her Cardboard Lover" is a comedy of the eternal triangle, but with two new angles—a husband who is not a husband and a "cardboard lover."

"The Girl From Child's" coming to the Nixon next week, is a musical comedy through which runs the story of a lovely young girl employed as a waitress. Through a love romance she is suddenly thrown into an atmosphere of wealth and high social standing. Seats go on sale in the box office of the Nixon tomorrow.

The "My Maryland" business in the Alvin continues at record figures, according to John B. Reynolds, manager of this theater, for he states that the first two days of this week and the advance sale for the balance of the engagement is running ahead of last week's sale, which set a new box office record. The operetta will play a matinee today.

A comedy, "The Poor Nut," starring Jack Mulhall, with Jane Winton, will be seen on the screen in the Davis next week, supplementing the Keith-Albee program.

MARINES CHASE NICARAGUAN BANDIT

By Universal Service

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—American Marines have finally encountered and dispersed rebels under the leadership of the celebrated bandit, Chief Sandino, the State Department was advised from Managua today.

Sandino and his force were encountered near Quilali, where two American Marine aviators were recently lost. Two combat patrols, one of A[illegible] of Nicaraguan constabulary, closed in on the rebel stronghold. The bandits were dispersed after a brief engagement and Marines and constabulary are now in pursuit.

Sandino apparently escaped. Unless he is captured he plans to form another bandit-rebel army, reports indicate.

DENNISON BOY INJURED WHEN STRUCK BY AUTO

DENNISON, O., Nov. 2.—Nunzio Alfanoi, 9, son of Saul Alfano, suffered a fractured skull and two fractured ribs yesterday when struck by a coach driven by Mrs. E. G. Morris, Uhrichsville. She was exonerated of blame.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Another Name Added to Guest Lists With Debut of Miss Juliet Hillman at Afternoon Tea

A second grown-up personality is added to dinner and dance lists with the presentation of Juliet Hillman, daughter of the junior John Hartwell Hillmans, at a tea this afternoon, given by Mrs. Hillman, in their Fifth avenue home. Juliet is the oldest of seven children, four others of whom are potential debutantes—a rather harrowing prospect for the mother, I think, when all things are considered.

The entire first floor of the Hillman residence is utilized, the debutante, her mother and her grandmother, Mrs. Henry Lea, receiving in the music room, through which guests pass to the large billiard room just beyond, where tea is served. Additional serving space is afforded by the dining room, and chatting space by the drawing room and den. The orchestra has a specially reserved spot in the back hall. The large high-ceilinged rooms, product of another era—the house was an old one purchased and remodeled with limestone by the Hillmans—are fragrant with the scent of the debutante's gift flowers.

She wears a frock of peach tinted transparent velvet, with long tight sleeves edged with lace, and rounded neck outlined with lace. Her mother wears orchid transparent velvet, and her grandmother, a gown of [illegible]

The honor guest has a group of sister debutantes to pilot her guests, among them Marjorie Babcock, Mary Louise Johnson, Mary Mellon McClung, Elizabeth George, Mary Childs, Jane Foster, Anne Louise Marshall and Florence Carroll and Clarissa Reed.

Mrs. Hillman is assisted by her aunt, Mrs. Charles B. McMichael, of Philadelphia; Mrs. John McCalmont Wilson, Miss Agnes Cummins, Mrs. Samuel Alfred McClung, Mrs. Terrell Johnson, Mrs. J. King Scott, Mrs. Reuben Miller, Jr., Mrs. William McKennan Reed, Mrs. Andrew Bart Berger, Mrs. Alan Stephenson Humphreys, Mrs. James Frazer Hillman, Mrs. Carl Borntraeger, Mrs. Matthew Taylor, Mrs. George Pearson Rhodes, Mrs. Thomas J. McKay, Mrs. George C. Wilson, Jr., Mrs. William Loudon Rowe, Mrs. C. M. Harnies, Mrs. William B. Salsbury and Mrs. Gordon Fisher.

The decoratons, particularly exquisite in detail, consist of orchid and yellow chrysanthemums and roses. The tea tables hold ivory French urns of roses, one table pink, with white bouvardia and one yellow, with white bouvardia. Ivory candelabra hold candles with a relief rose design, each tiny flower centered with a rhinestone.

Mrs. George Liggett Craig, of Bank street, Sewickley, will welcome her new daughter-in-law, Mrs. George Liggett Craig, Jr., not only into the family circle, but also into the neighborhood group, at a tea in the Edgeworth Club, December 8. Mrs. Craig, Jr., you will recall as the lovely Miss Kathleen Casey, better known as "Honey" Casey, and her marriage to Mr. Craig was an event of last January, following which she and her husband joined the winter colony in Nassau. They have been living since their return in Kipling road.

At the opening of the winter season plans are already perfected for travels in mid-season, when even the gayest of parties cannot compensate for bad weather. Mrs. William Larimer Mellon, of Ben Elm, Darlington road, is one of the prospective travelers. With her daughter, Mrs. Alexander Laughlin, Jr., who was Miss Margaret Mellon, and Mrs. Laughlin's small son, Alexander Laughlin III, she will leave about the middle of December for Poland Springs, California, to remain until spring.

Early fall brides, who had their little day and departed for wedding trips of varying lengths, are beginning to arrive home, in time for the opening of the winter social season. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Fisher, Jr., arrived in New York from Europe Sunday and will come to Pittsburgh some time this week to occupy their own home in Roslyn Place. Mrs. Fisher, you will remember, was Miss Dorothy Arnold Babcock, only daughter of the Edward Vose Babcocks, of Ellsworth avenue and Colonial place. Her marriage to Mr. Fisher, who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Fisher, of Colonial place, was the largest and most elaborate of the September weddings, and was solemnized at Vosemary, the Babcock summer home at Valencia. Mrs. Fisher will be in the midst of things more or less all winter, because of the family's debutante, Miss Marjorie Babcock, daughter of Fred R. Babcock, who is occupying the Park house at Fifth and Negley avenues this winter.

Mrs. Henry Clay Bughman, Jr., of Sewickley, went East Saturday to meet her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard G. Woods, of North Lincoln avenue, North Side, who have spent the summer traveling in Europe. They, too, have returned in time for the start of the season here, Mrs. Woods being one of a group of a dozen or more matrons who to some extent dominate the city's social life—not in a dictatorial sense, but rather in the fact that they appear each year in some capacity, either presenting a debutante or assisting with the presentation of one, directing a benefit, or working at some one of the other numerous duties which fall to the lot of the capable. The fact that Mrs. Woods entertained last winter for two of the girls who came out, Miss Josephine Ormsby Nicola and Miss Molly Miller, now Mrs. William Bacon Schiller, Jr., reminds me of the fact that it will be only a very few years before she will be presenting her granddaughter, Betty Berry Bughman, small daughter of the junior Henry Clay Bughmans.

A former very popular member of the active social group here, Miss Mildred Carlisle Burgwin, is spending a few weeks visiting friends following her graduation as a nurse from the Presbyterian Hospital, New York. Later she will return to New York to practice her profession. At present she is the guest of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. John Henry King Burgwin, of St. James street.

Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Kountze Oliver, of Maple Heights, Fifth avenue, are to celebrate their twentieth anniversary with a large dinner dance in their home the night of November 10.

Mrs. Malcolm W. Leech, Jr., of Kinsman road, was hostess yesterday afternoon at a tea to announce the engagement of her sister, Miss Katharine S. Humphreys, daughter of William Y. Humphreys, of Dallas avenue, and Paul B. Dickey. Mr. Dickey is a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Warren Dickey, of Pittsburgh.

CHAIRMAN FOR DANCE

Mrs. Samuel McLaughlin Parks is chairman of the benefit dance and card party which the Home and Hospital Club of Bellevue will give tomorrow night in the Highland Country Club.

MRS. SAMUEL M'LAUGHLIN PARKS

Katharine is a sister of Alan Stephenson Humphreys, who married Rebecca Berger, only daughter of the Andrew Bart Bergers, and has been an attendant at numerous fashionable weddings in the past few years, notably that of Margaret Mellon and the late Alexander Laughlin, Jr., so her own wedding should be a pretty event.

Miss Florence Carroll, daughter of the Walter Cockrill Carrolls, of College avenue, the first of the winter's debutantes, made her first appearance at a tea given by her mother yesterday in their home. Simple decorations were used, greens mingling with the many gift bouquets. Miss Carroll's frock was pale yellow lace over flesh colored satin and she carried a pendant bouquet of yellow roses with heather and blue tulle. Mrs. Carroll wore gold cloth with black satin and a corsage of yellow roses. Mary Edith Carroll, a sister of the debutante, received with them. Assisting were Mrs. Samuel McClay, Mrs. Frederick I. Merrick, Mrs. Frederick S. Morris and a group of debutantes.

MUSICAL CLUB CHANGES DATE FOR CONCERT

The Tuesday Musical Club has changed the date for its annual concert from November 11 to November 22. It will be held in Carnegie Music Hall and promises to be of unusual interest. The three local contest winners of the State Federation of Music Clubs, Mrs. Martha Eaton Brickman, soprano; Mrs. Rose Meitlein Litt, violin, and Miss Marilla Kohary, piano, will be the soloists and will give the first half of the program, while the second half will consist of Harvey B. Gaul's "Johnny Appleseed," which he has dedicated to the public schools and Dr. Will Earhart. It will be presented by a chorus of 300 picked voices and an orchestra of 50 pieces, both made up of school children.

The 400 and some members of the club who were in attendance in Upper Memorial Hall yesterday heard an especially fine program. There were Helen Bell Rush and Viola Karlson Byrgerson, alone sufficient for an hour of keen beauty and delight. Then, too, the recital was in the nature of both welcome and farewell to Miss Georgia Orwig, a promising young pianist, who is leaving Pittsburgh to study elsewhere, and who was making her first appearance before the Tuesday Musical Club. Miss Orwig gave the opening number on the program, Chopin's "Fantasie in F Minor," and again distinguished herself in Von Weber's "Concertstuck" with a quintet composed of Miss Elizabeth K. Irwin and Miss Mary Redmont, violins; Mrs. W. A. Weldin, viola; Mrs. Christine Adams Jones, 'cello, and Julius Bielo, bass. Miss Orwig plays brilliantly and with an astonishing power, but lacks, probably because of her youth, a little sympathy and warmth. Miss Rush's voice, despite a nasty cold, was as lovely as usual in her four numbers, "Se Tu M'Ami" (Pergolesi), an aria from "Figaro," and two Cecconi songs, for which Mrs. James H. Greene played sympathetic accompaniments. Mrs. Byrgerson's golden contralto, exquisite in its warmth and beauty, gave Henschel's "Morning," Hageman's "Do Not Go, My Love" and La Forge's ringing "Hills." Mrs. Marian Clarke Bollinger played the accompaniments for Mrs. Byrgerson, who was substituting on an eleventh-hour notice for Miss Virginia Kendrick. The program, which was arranged by Miss Else Sternsdorff and Mrs. Martha Myers Murdoch, also included a Lazzari "Sonata" for violin and piano by Miss Elizabeth Knox Irwin and Mrs. Virginia Brown Wilharm.

All committee chairmen will report at the quarterly meeting of the Pittsburgh Business and Professional Women's Club in the Fort Pitt Hotel tomorrow night. Miss Anna Adams, Miss Ella King Vogel and Miss Jewel Foley will report the state executive board meeting held at Williamsport.

Miss Vogel, Miss Adams and Miss Mary Jane Clarke, president of the local club, are on the program for a district conference to be held in New Castle Saturday afternoon and night.

Representatives will be present from the clubs of Erie, Meadville, Corry, Union City, Sharon, Butler, Wilkinsburg and Pittsburgh. Miss Helen M. Schlureif, of Erie, president of the Pennsylvania State Federation, is to have charge of the sessions. Dr. Mildred Rogers, president of the New Castle Club, will serve as toastmistress at the banquet to be held at the Castleu Hotel.

A supper and bazar will be held tomorrow night by the Women's Guild of St. Alban's Episcopal Church, Duquesne, in the church basement. Mrs. G. J. Bryen is general chairman; Mrs. W. J. Bennett chairman of the supper, and Mrs. Agnes Bryen Rankin, of the bazar.

The evening department (formerly the junior section) of the Aspinwall Woman's Club met last night in the clubhouse. Mrs. A. B. Corbin presided, and under the direction of the drama committee, Miss Kate MacKenzie, chairman, a two-act comedy, "The Classic Dancing School," was presented by a cast including Mrs. Corbin, Mrs. E. G. Ender, Miss Jennie McMorran, Mrs. E. C. Schneider, Mrs. C. M. Frecker, Mrs. Charles Roamer, Miss Edna Krieg and Mrs. H. C. Meyer. Mrs. Eleanor Gray Duckwall was chairman of hostesses.

The seniors' drama department, under the chairmanship of Mrs. E. W. Duckwall, will give three one-act plays in the high school auditorium the nights of November 10 and 11.

Three deans of women, Miss Thyrsa W. Amos, University of Pittsburgh; Miss Mary Watson Green, Carnegie Institute of Technology, and Miss Louise Fitch, Cornell University, will be guests of honor of the Pittsburgh Panhellenic Association at the luncheon in the Roosevelt Hotel November 19. Miss Fitch will speak. Reservations for the luncheon, which is being given to raise four full scholarships for sophomore women students, are being taken by Mrs. Kenneth R. Burke, Shady avenue.

Mrs. Herbert McDonald and Mrs. R. J. MacKenzie entertained the Lincoln Park Chautauqua Circle at luncheon yesterday in Mrs. McDonald's home, Oliver avenue, Homestead. Mrs. V. K. Leslie was chairman for the day. Mrs. Rollins A. Haddock, Jr., the president, led the study book discussion and several members gave current events. The Junior Circle met today in the home of Mrs. A. C. MacCumbee, Pointview street, East End.

Miss Dorothy Mussler, soprano; Mrs. Oliver Heck, contralto; Miss Grace Eloise McMillan, piano; Miss Cecile Spargo, violin; Ernest John Wright, tenor, and I. Kay Myers, baritone, with Edward W. Koontz, accompanying, will give the program at the musicale which the music department of the Mt. Lebanon Women's Club will sponsor Friday night in the home of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Ervin, Jefferson drive.

Miss Vera Barger, who is a guest of Miss Ida M. Allerton, of Grafton street, will speak at the East Liberty Young Women's Christian Association at a luncheon Friday. Until a few months ago Miss Barger was head of physical education work for women in China. All members have been invited to hear Miss Barger at the luncheon, and she will also talk to business girls and club groups on Friday night at a supper meeting.

The visit of the Avalon Woman's Club to the international art exhibit will be made Monday and will take the place of the monthly meeting. Members have been asked to make reservations, not later than Friday. Mrs. Carl E. Behrhorst is arranging a recital of Christmas carols to be given by the members at the December meeting. The literary department will meet Monday evening at the home of Mrs. J. S. Fruit, Cleveland avenue.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Episcopal Church will hold a united thank offering service in Trinity Church tomorrow, beginning at 10 o'clock. At the business meeting following, Mrs. Karl Emmerling, the president, will preside, and the speaker will be Mrs. Bayard Stewart, of Manilla, Philippine Islands.

Invitations have been issued by the Woman's Club of Hazelwood for a reception in honor of the president, Mrs. E. E. Roney, Thursday, November 10, in Odd Fellows' Hall. Responses are to be made to Mrs. George Edwards.

George Seibel, literary and dramatic editor of the Sun-Telegraph, will address the Women's Press Club next Monday afternoon, speaking on "Yesterdays and Tomorrows." The club will meet in the Woman's City Club.

M'GOVERN RAPS INJUNCTION REASONS

The answer of Charles C. McGovern, county controller, in the injunction proceedings brought on behalf of Joseph R. Gaussa, a county road maintenance superintendent, to prevent McGovern from examining records of Gaussa's account with the Potter Title and Trust Company, was filed in the Prothonotary's office today.

It declares there is nothing set forth in Gaussa's petition to show a need for injunctive relief and denies that examination of Gaussa's account or any testimony in connection with it would incriminate the man in proceedings pending against him in other courts. McGovern also sets forth that records of the County Treasurers office show much money paid to Gaussa which McGovern, as auditor, should investigate. An examination of Gaussa's account will greatly facilitate this investigation, the answer states.

A preliminary injunction was granted Gaussa by Judge Ambrose B. Reid yesterday. A hearing on the order will be held Friday.

ARMSTRONG HAS RELAPSE

County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, who has been suffering from a severe cold, suffered a relapse last night when his temperature neared the danger point. He was stricken last week while attending funeral services for his brother, Thomas Armstrong.

Misses' Social Calendars Make Note of Chiffons and Velvets

The Winter social season whirls into gayety . . . and the co-ed, as well as her debutante cousin, finds joy in new frocks. And each one must be carefully chosen . . . for color, for the grace of draperies, for tiny new details that smartness loves. The afternoon frock, you know, is no longer just "any little frock" . . . but it is decidedly soft and frivolous. Chiffons. Long sleeved—some have shirring for all the world like the little tot wears! It's wonderfully quaint and youthful. The fuller skirt, the old-fashioned bertha, the tighter sleeve, metal trimming

And for evening—we are grateful to Paris for velvets. Velvets . . . lovely transparent things that romance with soft lights and waltzes. Velvets that drape, that combine with chiffon, that wear brilliant pins.

Kaufmann's invite you to visit this wonder floor, to see and enjoy what we have gathered here from the end-most corners of the globe—to revel in the pageantry of color that the genius of the world of art has provided, to choose the smartly modern, the quaint, the finely traditional, the authentic—at prices not of the art shops and the exclusive decorators, but at fair, modest, boldly lower, KAUFMANN'S prices.

—In Preparing Your Home for the Winter

—In Making Your Plans for Holiday Entertaining

—In Your Quest for Holiday Gifts

Our Seventh Floor can serve you uniquely. Kaufmann's representatives have traveled to every section of the earth, to every important market center, to every out-of-the-way European hamlet where the workers have an industry—to seek out the new, the interesting, the better-made "tools" that will make your household work easier, speedier, happier. A great many of these "tools" are really art objects as well as utilities, and some of them are so very unusual that they immediately suggest gifts! For example:

From Vienna

We have brought back Serving Trays in many fascinating shapes and types, and of many sizes. One has a frame finished in rich, deep brown mahogany, holding a double glass bottom in which is inserted gold mesh petit-point. What a charming gift indeed! . . . for mother, or aunt or married sister. From Vienna, too, come exquisite, old-worldly kinds of beverage sets . . . combining crystal, silver plate and mellow mahogany, in new and delightful ways.

From England

Are some wonderfully quaint Sun Dials, Mail Boxes, Door Knockers, Marshmallow Forks, Andirons, Monastery Bells, and so on.

Color—In the Kitchen. Color—In the Laundry Color—In the Bathroom

The newer kitchens in the smartest houses are being entirely color-equipped — everything — stove, cabinet, table, chairs (these to be painted), pots, pans, cutlery, carafe sets, waffle-irons, toasters, percolators, brooms, canisters of all kinds, enamel ware of all kinds, food choppers, glassware, scales, trays, candlesticks—everything! And colored Electric Ironers and Washers! And colored bathroom mirrors, bath stools, medicine cabinets, lavatory stands, toilet seats, toilets, shower curtains, fixtures of all sorts. And colored fancy baskets, bird cages and stands, children's feeding sets, etc.—almost every imaginable household need—in joyous reds, blues, greens, yellows—imprisoned laughter! All on that Floor of Magic, the Seventh.

A GRIPPING STORY OF MARGIE-WHO TRIED TO TRICK LOVE

By Gilbert Rogers

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

MARGIE MARSH comes to New York with $1,000 and a wonderful education. She keeps house with four other girls, learns stenography, and decides after three years to marry. She fails to find her ideal, and Dan Shevlin, a shrewd man of the world, offers to introduce her into smart society through a Mrs. Brooke, provided Margie will give him some security. This security consists of a note which he dictates and Margie recklessly signs, to the effect that she loves him and will never regret the six months she has spent with him. Through Mrs. Brooke she buys wonderful clothes which Shevlin pays for. Mrs. Brooke opens her cottage in Newport and Margie meets her brother, Mark Trelaw, a cripple. She scores a success with rich Tubby Wells and discovers he is secretly married. This information greatly interests Shevlin. Mrs. Brooke confesses she is in Shevlin's power and Margie begins to feel very uneasy. She has met Jerry Evesham, a poor young man, who greatly attracts her. She goes aboard Tubby Wells' yacht in her bathing suit. He makes violent love to her and she dives off the boat and is rescued by Jerry, who confesses he is mad about her. She realizes she is in love at last. She tries to break with Shevlin, but he persuades her to meet the very rich Adrian Martin, Mark Trelaw warns her against Shevlin. She confesses to Jerry that she is as poor as he.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

HE HAD said: "I don't write letters. I can't—besides, no letter could tell you what I feel. I'll wire you if anything happens." When she begged him for just a word, he shook his head. "No, I'll save up until I get back. It will be all right. Just think of me once in a while—if you can."

Then he had gone, waving his hand, while she stood watching, feeling lonely as if for the first time she had learned the meaning of loneliness.

Time—it went so fast sometimes, but so slowly when you were waiting, really waiting, for something. With Carlotta Brooke she filled every minute of every day, yet she seemed to herself to be always waiting. She went to tea, luncheon, dinner, played a beginner's game of golf, watched some crack tennis players at the Casino.

And people—she could remember more faces than names, though even these made scarcely an impression on her now. She was glad the story of her upbringing in France had got about. It saved her from explaining why she didn't play bridge, vingt et un, or know any of the things one was supposed to know.

But in that week there was only one thing she had really enjoyed doing. She asked Carlotta about Jerry's aunt.

"Mrs. Farrington? Never heard of her. Oh, yes, I know now—some dreadful middle-western people. They've taken a big gaudy house and are giving big gaudy entertainments to which nobody goes. It will take them five years to break in, and then they'll have probably spent all their money."

Margie strolled out towards dusk one evening to look at the big, gaudy house. Jerry had stayed there—they were Jerry's people.

The house was stucco, set back of a long drive with an artificial fountain before it. Lights in all the windows, a feeling of life, activity, behind those white, cold walls. Margie stared for a long time before she went away.

If Jerry had only written! But this waiting and wondering was so hard. . . . And worst of all, she had promised to meet Adrian Martin, and Adrian Martin was here. Worst of all, because now, without ever having seen him, she had taken a violent dislike to him.

Little words of Carlotta's dropped ever so casually, made an unpleasant picture. She saw Adrian Martin as someone with puffy eyes, a loose mouth, violent and ruthless. Why had Shevlin wanted her to meet him, try to interest him? And because Shevlin had talked sentimentally of favors, played on her sense of fairness, she had promptly agreed. How could she get out of it? Did she really owe Shevlin that?

Of course, meeting Adrian Martin didn't matter. In a way she was curious . . . but—to flirt with him, lead him on—! And that was what Shevlin had asked. She wouldn't, she couldn't!

"I don't mind his liking me, of course," she told herself, looking into the mirror! Friday evening, before going on to Mrs. Drake's dance. "But trying to make him like me! No, I won't do that. I'll just meet him, and he'll probably hat me, and I'll tell Dan Shevlin that."

Adrian Martin was certain to be at Mrs. Drake's dance, for Mrs. Drake ruled the social colony, and the dinner and dance with which she opened the season was like a roll call of the elect.

"What those people you were asking about the other day, those Farringtons, would give to be invited!" Carlotta exclaimed. "This is really your first smart affair. All ready, darling?"

Carlotta looked so gay and lovely, and yet her loveliness only set off the simplicity and delicate curves of Sally's oval face. They drove to the big Drake house, alighted before the big iron gates, stepped into a great hall that had the treasures of a palace in it. "Like living in the New York Astor Library," Margie thought.

Tall columns going up to an immense ceiling with polychrome carving. Chinese rugs that stretched endlessly, footmen in the lower hallway, Mrs. Drake, a little old woman with white, piled hair, all in black, receiving with blank, cold eyes, a blank, cold smile.

Margie shivered. "Carlotta, I must be common . . . I'd rather live in a tenement."

"Shh! Someone wil hear you. . . . What a crowd! Oh, there's Mabel Bradon . . . I must speak to her. . . ."

Across the wide floor, great doorways opened upon a ballroom, and in a kind of balcony an orchestra was playing. People were dancing under the crystal lights, hung as if in a theater. Margie nodded to a boy she had met, and then was dancing with him.

He talked of golf in a husky voice while he danced, and then left her to mix himself a highball. . . . Groups here and there chatted together, or men and women sat in attitudes of tension, speaking rapidly and in low voices, that proclaimed that they were about to be lovers, or had ceased to be.

Men with decorations and foreign faces, diplomats, officers, old men with shrewd eyes who looked as if they ruled a bank with each finger, women of all ages, tired and wise, with seeking, restless faces.

Carlotta had disappeared. Margie stole away. She didn't want to dance now. She felt uncomfortable in this elaborate place. She passed a long refectory table, where cold lobster, pate de fois-gras, and innumerable things lay temptingly, yet tempting no one.

Tubby Wells had left town, Carlotta had told her. She was glad of that. She did not ever want to see him again. As for Adrian Martin, well, she could hardly find him in this crowd, and Carlotta had disappeared. She would tell Shevlin she hadn't been able to meet him.

A man was standing near one of the columns, with folded arms, smoking a thin panatella. His head had a dark, swarthy look which his immaculate evening white and black heightened. It was a heavy head, with heavy eyelids, a large, humorous mouth. He looked as if he had been born tired.

She met his eyes, and passed on. Then wandered by herself in a billiard room, and found she was alone. She sat down and began to think of Jerry.

All at once the man he had noticed sauntered in, nodded to her with a little smile, and rolled back the gold and scarlet drapery that covered the table. He selected a cue, and without a word began to practice some shots. Margie watched him without speaking. Somehow she felt amused, as if he were giving her a special entertainment. He made an excellent shot.

"What about that?" he asked, turning. His voice was casual but rich and heavy. There was no doubt he had fascination.

"Awfully good," she admitted.

He put down his cue deliberately. "Would you mind telling me what you are doing in here all alone? Whom are you running away from?"

"I don't know," said Margie, adding with sudden frankness, "unless it's Adrian Martin."

He gave a quick glance. "Why run away from Adrian Martin? Don't you like him?"

"I haven't met him yet. I don't want to meet him."

"He's not such a bad fellow."

"Oh, I suppose men might like him."

"He has some reason for thinking women do also. His three ex-wives could furnish excellent testimonials."

She laughed. "You must be a good friend of his."

"I am. I'm his best friend."

"Really?"

"Yes. You see, I am Adrian Martin."

CHAPTER XIX.

AFTER a moment's bewildered state, Margie gave a short laugh of embarrassment.

"Why didn't you tell me?" she asked.

"I had hopes of hearing some good of myself," he answered.

She looked at him critically. He was unlike anything she had heard or expected, and yet he wasn't. Under his heavy lids, his eyes might have been Oriental.

WILSON'S BULLDOG TENACITY GIVEN A TEST

Life and Letters of War President

Standing Against the Warnings and Advice of Friends, He Wins a Partial Victory at Princeton

In his crusade for the democratizing of community life at Princeton University through establishment of the quad system, as told in the chapter of "The Life and Letters of Woodrow Wilson" in the Sun-Telegraph yesterday, Wilson put to severe test friendships that were his greatest riches. Bitter opposition arose where support had been looked for. How he pressed for adoption of his ideal, as later he pressed for adoption of his League of Nations plan, made an absorbing story.

The Country Watches Wilson

NO OPPOSITION touched Wilson more vitally than that of Prof. Hibben. To Wilson's intense, idealistic, sensitive nature such a friendship had something sacred about it. The two men had been for years almost inseparable. Wilson's many letters to Mr. and Mrs. Hibben give evidence of the depth of his feeling, his dependence upon them:

"Thank you with all my heart for your letter," he wrote to Mr. Hibben early in 1907. "It would be hard for me to tell you—I fear I never can by word of mouth—how your thoughtfulness and love touch and delight me. Your letter contained just the things I wanted to hear—just the items of news, and, above all, just the assurances of being thought of and missed and loved."

Whenever a new committee was appointed, Hibben was sure to be on it: Wilson had asked him to serve in his place as president of the university while he was ill the year before, Stockton Axson says in a letter to the author:

"Mr. Hibben was of the deliberate type, dependable. The Wilson family turned to him instinctively when there was need of a friend, in sickness or sudden death. He never failed them in an emergency. But between the two men there was this great difference: Mr. Wilson would act suddenly and then hold on like a bulldog, without compromise; . Mr. Hibben would arrive at conclusions more slowly and it was his habit to listen to others, to compromise for half a loaf where the whole loaf could not be had."

Wilson Warned by Hibben

Wilson, with his passionate devotion to principle, felt that Hibben, who knew the evils he was attacking as well as any one, was arguing expediency. Hibben considered that he was only offering the "poor but well intended offices of friendship" in warning Wilson of the dangers that confronted him. He said in a letter to Wilson on July 8, 1907:

"You know that I would never have sought to 'rob you of hope,' as Mrs. Wilson characterized it, unless I had thought that I might at the same time forearm you by forwarning you of the gathering opposition. Were it not for my own convictions as to the dangers which attend this plan as regards the vital interests of Princeton, I would have gladly stood with you shoulder to shoulder against the world. Feeling as I do on that score, the only possibility remaining as a friend was to show you as far as I saw it myself the existing conditions as regards the attitude of the trustees, faculty and alumni to your plan and the manner of its presentation to the Princeton community."

Both van Dyke and Hibben visited Wilson at his summer home in the Adirondacks, and there were long arguments. He could not at all convince van Dyke, but since van Dyke's opposition was based upon wholly different convictions and principles, Wilson had no quarrel with him. They remained friends; Wilson, when President of the United States, appointed van Dyke Minister to Holland.

. . . "I ventured to oppose President Wilson," Dr. van Dyke has said, "without any personal animosity whatever, and our side won out. He and I never broke friendly relations during the conflict, and when it was ended neither of us needed to apologize, and I was able with sincere joy to give him my humble support in his political career, first as Governor of New Jersey, and second as President of the United States and the greatest friend of world peace that our age has seen."

To argue with Wilson that his diagnosis was incorrect, or that his remedy was inapplicable, was tolerable to him, but to warn him that all the powers of the earth were opposing him, and that he should therefore pull down his flag, was to stiffen every fiber of his hard-knit Scotch spirit. If he was right, or felt that he was, what did opposition matter!

A Letter to Garfield

His summer, indeed, was overburdened with work. He was desperately trying to revise his Columbia lectures for a book. He was having more and more to consider talk of his political availability. He was spending much time writing out a "Credo" of his political beliefs and preparing an article for "The Atlantic Monthly" which he called "Political Contrasts," tracing the political history of America since 1857, and seeking the application of its lessons to the problems of the times. Well might he write to his friend Harry A. Garfield, who had just been elected president of Williams College:

"St. Hubert's, Essex Co., N. Y.,
"16 July, 1907.

"My Dear Garfield:

"I congratulate Williams with all my heart, and I know that Princeton's loss is irreparable. I do not know whether to congratulate you or not. It is very delightful to serve one's alma mater with all one's powers, but I believe there is no one in the country who can realize more vividly or more fully what you are sacrificing and what exceeding burdens you are assuming than I can. I often long for my old quiet life as student and professor with an intensity that makes me very unhappy. But I am sure that you are answering a call of duty as I did; and I hope that, with your disposition, you will not suffer as much as I have suffered under the burden of painful tasks and misunderstandings—struggles with one's friends, and a sort of isolation of responsibility the extent of which I had not at all anticipated. I pray with deep affection that you may be blessed in every part of your work, and that some good fortune may often give us a touch of one another's mind and heart. We must make diligent use of the year of comradeship that remains to us.

"Your affectionate friend,
"WOODROW WILSON."

Wilson returned to Princeton in September as to a battleground. His friends were meeting at Prof. Ormond's house, or Dean Fine's office; his opponents with Dean West. On September 26 came the first great faculty meeting. It was held in Nassau Hall, in the faculty room arranged so much like the British House of Commons, with portraits of former presidents of Princeton upon the walls. Wilson presided—a kind of prime minister submitting his fate to a division of the house! His own "party" proposed the resolution: Daniels presented it, Hunt seconded:

"Be it resolved, That in the principle of the plan recently sanctioned by the board of trustees for the social co-ordination of the university the faculty do concur and that a committee of seven be appointed to co-operate with the president, the dean of the faculty and the committee of the board already constituted to elaborate the plan in question."

Faculty Fight On

The faculty fight was on. Dr. Van Dyke countered with a speech and offered a substitute motion to this effect:

"That the board of trustees be asked that a committee be appointed from their body and the faculty who, with the president, shall investigate the present social condition of the university in conjunction with representatives of the alumni and students, and consider the best method of curing evils which exist and of maintaining and promoting the unity, democracy and scholarly life of the undergraduates."

Here the issue was clearly joined. It was a moment of breathless intensity. No one knew quite where the faculty really stood. Prof. Hibben slowly rose—"you could hear a pin drop!"—and seconded Van Dyke's motion. President Wilson turned pale.

Pressing for His Ideal

"Do I understand that Prof. Hibben seconds the motion?" the president asked in steady tones, but as one who could scarcely believe what he heard and saw.

"I do, Mr. President," was the grave reply.

No vote, however, was taken at that time; but four days later the second momentous faculty meeting took place. What position would the new preceptors take, who now made up such a proportion of the faculty? What would the "old faculty" do? The result of the vote was decisive. Eight were against the Van Dyke resolution, 23 for it. In short, an overwhelming victory for the Wilson group. It was charged afterward that the preceptors carried the day. As a matter of fact a majority of both preceptors and "old faculty" sided with Wilson. Thirty-one of the "old faculty" against 22 were with him.

The third great faculty meeting came on October 7 and it was here that Wilson made a speech which some of those who heard it consider one of the remarkable addresses of his life. He had prepared it with great care. He endeavored to present not only the necessity but the reasonableness of his proposals, not "as imagined and misrepresented," but "as in fact conceived and intended." He emphasized again the central idea of his entire educational philosophy:

"Any organization that has the idea of exclusiveness at its foundation is antagonistic to the best training for citizenship in a democratic country," he said. "If such organizations exist they must at least be subordinate and not of the very structure of the place."

During the entire summer the board, and especially the quad committee, had been the center of hot controversy. Alumni organizations and other exponents of Wilson's plan felt that their only avenue of appeal was to the governing body. The same lines of cleavage began to develop there as in the faculty. The members were alarmed at the extent of the storm. Some were for fighting the battle straight through—men like David B. Jones and Dr. Jacobus. Others began to doubt, waver or become active opponents. One of the most powerful of the latter was Moses Taylor Pyne, who had at first supported Wilson enthusiastically and had voted affirmatively in the June meeting.

The struggle was beginning now to attract much attention in the outside world. Newspapers and magazines showed deep interest in and, in general, sympathy for Wilson's bold attempt to cure old and well-recognized evils. The "Review of Reviews" contained an article commending the quad system. It said in part:

"No more fundamental and courageous move in the direction of vitality and wholesomeness in academic life has been made in recent years."

Charles Francis Adams wrote to Woodrow Wilson on October 2:

"Your theory of 'quads' seems to me more nearly to meet existing college requirements than anything else which has been advanced."

The struggle was to come to a head in the October meeting of the board.

The defeat of Woodrow Wilson's "quad" plan for Princeton will be recorded in tomorrow's chapter. The opposition, headed by Dean West and Grover Cleveland, finally won the battle.

MUSIC

San Carlo Opera
Lucia di Lammermoor

Last night the San Carlo Opera Company gave Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor" at the Pitt Theater, and deserved a larger audience. Those present seemed to be waiting only for the sextet, when they broke into tremendous applause and then grew less enthusiastic.

The libretto is the barest outline of Sir Walter Scott's "Bride of Lammermoor." Donizetti did nothing more than write some unforgettable melodies, real delights of sopranos and tenors, and an orchestral accompaniment that rarely does mor than play second fiddle to the voic The harp interlude in the first a struggles for effect; if well played is a pretty solo. Peroni direct steadily and attained his best resu with the chorus. It is alway liable and intelligent at the Carlo performances. The ballet too short a scene to be noticeable.

Tina Paggi's Lucia has no dramatic distinction. In this role the singer must give too much attention to the director's baton and to her partner, the flutist, to be interested in the story. But Paggi's voice is one of the few real coloraturas in the company. Too frequently Lucia is sung by lyric sopranos whose voices lack the necessary sparkle for the floratura. Edgar was sung by a new tenor, Giuseppe Barsotti. Clear high notes followed one another with perfect clarity in all his arias and duets, but his quality is too nasal and almost without color. Interrante's Ashton was most dignified; he played thoughtfully, but is often late for the beat on his entrances. Natale Cervi has one of his few opportunities to sing in this opera; his Raymond showed the remarkable versatility of this singer. Beatrice Altieri sang Alice, and Francesco Curci with his chronic fog sang Bucklaw.

Tonight "Aida" will be sung with almost an entirely new cast.

CREDO SPEAKER URGES UNITY

World progress has been built largely on co-operation, and those who co-operate usually find success, in the opinion of Pressly J. Bailey, who yesterday addressed the members of the Credo Club of the Credit Association of Western Pennsylvania in the Chamber of Commerce. He showed how many men had succeeded because they maintained a right attitude.

W. S. Diggs presented the Pittsburgh Chapter of the Red Cross plea for membership and told of the canvass to be made Sunday, November 13.

PITTSBURGH MINISTER DIES ON HUNTING TRIP

BUTLER, Pa., Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Stricken on the eve of a hunting trip he had planned for weeks, the Rev. Samuel L. Boston, 75, of Pittsburgh, died at a hotel here yesterday from a blood clot on the brain. The Rev. Boston, a retired Presbyterian minister, was accompanied here by Dr. S. B. Moon of Pittsburgh and had planned to make an early start in the Butler county rabbit fields. His body was removed to Pittsburgh.

"I'M FLIER, NOT FLAPPER," RUTH TELLS PARIS

Aviatrix Dances Where World War Ended

By International News Service.

PARIS, Nov. 2.—A visit to the Jupiter motor factory and a luncheon given by M. Potez, airplane manufacturer, were foremost on the program today for Ruth Elder and George Haldeman.

The Americans will be guided [illegible] factory by Capt. Paul [illegible] is preparing for a non-[illegible] from Paris to San Fran-[illegible] a six-motored plane.

Her proposed visit to the motor factory and the luncheon given by the airplane manufacturer led Ruth to declare herself as an aviatrix first and a style-hunting woman second. To a group of women reporters who insisted upon directing their interview entirely toward Paris gowns and Ruth's interest in them, she said:

"I object to being considered just a brainless flapper. I did not come to Paris merely to go shopping. I wanted to fly here and I am interested essentially in flying.

"I like to go shopping, just as any woman does, and I have gotten a great thrill from shopping in Paris, but I am all through shopping and I don't want to be considered anything but a flier.

"I had hoped to do my bit toward commercial aviation and I still hope to do something to help develop it. I still feel that I shall be the first woman to make a trans-Atlantic flight. I have been restless for the last few days, hoping to be able to get a plane and do a few hours of flying. If I can get out to Le Bourget, I am going to try to make a flight, even if it is only around Paris."

Ruth and Haldeman spent most of yesterday sightseeing. In the Hall of Mirrors at Versailles, where the peace treaty of the great war was signed, Ruth exclaimed:

"What a beautiful floor to dance on."

Whereupon Senator Weiller, one of the party escorting the Americans, offered Ruth his arm and they danced around while other members of the party hummed a waltz tune.

Their evening was spent at a quiet informal dinner given by Sidney Veit.

$70,000 IN GEMS BANDIT LOOT

By Universal Service

CHICAGO, Nov. 2—J. S. Alexander, New York diamond salesman, was robbed of $70,000 in gems just as he had spread out his sparkling wares before Nathan Kahn, Chicago jeweler.

The three bandits, with 'kerchiefs over their eyes, walked into Kahn's store, took the gems at the point of guns and drove off.

AUTO DEAD TOP DEATH LIST

The October mortality record of the county coroner's office discloses a total of 270 deaths investigated by the office last month, according to the report given out by Coroner W. J. McGregor yesterday. Of this number 95 were due to accident, 162 to general epidemics and 11 are homicide cases.

In the number of deaths by accident the automobile heads the list with 26; railroads second with 12. Football has claimed one life, poison four and drownings three. In the general epidemics, suicides led the list with 22, the largest number in any one month this year, and almost double that of last month. Deaths among infants were high, 22 being recorded. Deaths from alcoholism numbered five. In the 11 homicides, nine were by shooting.

How Indigestion Leads to Ulcers

Indigestion is dangerous.

The same acid which sours the stomach, ferments the food, forms gas and causes pain, also attacks the delicate stomach lining, making it sore and raw. This is how ulcers start.

The safe treatment of indigestion requires the double-corrective action of Bi-nesia. This not only neutralizes acid instantly, thus stopping the pain at once—it also soothes, heals and protects the stomach lining and gives full protection against ulcers and chronic acidity.

Get a large 50 cent package of Bi-nesia tablets or powder of any druggist today and treat your indigestion the safe way.

EAST LIBERTY STORE INJUNCTION DROPPED

Injunction proceedings recently begun to prevent Milton Sadowsky from building a row of stores in Collins avenue have been discontinued. Anna E. Kent, who brought the action, claiming encroachment on property which she had leased, settled out of court. Judge A. B. Reid made the order discontinuing the suit.

DOWNTOWN "Y" MEN FORM SERVICE CLUB

The Meridian Club, an organization patterned after service clubs for business men, has been formed by the young men's division of the Downtown Y. M. C. McGOVERN SAYS:

"Competent engineers having surveyed the new bridges for the Controller's office, have criticised their design."—Pittsburgh Sun, July 28, 1927.

The Facts Are

The design of County bridges represent the combined experience of the following engineers:

V. R. Covell, trained at Ohio State University, 30 year's experience on County Bridges.

C. M. Reppert, trained at Cornell, now Chief Engineer, City of Pittsburgh.

Samuel Eckles, trained at Washington & Jefferson, now Chief Engineer State Highway Department.

A. D. Nutter, trained at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 20 years experience on County Bridges.

T. J. Wilkerson, trained at Missouri State University, Consulting Engineer Beaver County. Supervised construction of many large bridges in Western Pennsylvania.

A. A. Henderson, trained at Ohio State University, 28 years experience on County Bridges.

These bridges were approved by the Engineering staff of the United States War Department; Public Service Commission of Pennsylvania; State Highway Department; State Water and Resources Board; various Planning bodies and the engineers of numerous railroads and public utility companies concerned.

Margie Is Ordered to Flirt With Adrian Martin, but Refuses to Do It

He looked like somebody who had given himself up to pleasure cynically, as if he did not know the meaning of hesitation or remorse.

"I don't know why you expected to meet me," he went on, after a pause, "but I'd like to know why you didn't want to meet me."

You couldn't hurt a man like that, you couldn't treat him like other men. Margie's gift of frankness came to her.

"Because you've got a perfectly awful reputation," she said, cheerfully.

He lifted his eyebrows in mock surprise. "But that's the very reason why women do want to meet me," he insisted.

"Well, I'm different."

"They all are. Do you know, you're almost as pretty as you think you are."

"I don't think I'm pretty," Margie flared indignantly.

"Every woman does. If she didn't, she'd commit suicide immediately."

He looked so bored, so tired. Margie wanted to be angry, tried to be angry, but could only smile. "He's horrid and conceited," she thought, "but then he is funny. And I suppose he has a right to be conceited."

He was looking down, smiling to himself. "Living up to a bad reputation is sometimes harder than living up to a good one," he murmured. "Now I suppose you expected I was the sort of man who'd invite you to his place, order champagne, lock the door, throw the key out the window? Do you know, just for once it would give me pleasure to be as [illegible]—as you seem to want me to [illegible] Do me a favor. Break away from this place. Come home with me. Let me prove to you and myself that I can have a quiet chat with a woman without behaving like a confounded actor in a movie."

"Thanks. I can imagine it all perfectly."

"Ah, I see you believe me. You believe I would be dull and naturally you'd rather stay here."

He half sauntered to the door. "Charming little talk, Miss—don't know your name. But I'd only forget it anyway."

She did feel angry at him then, she did want to say something that would be scathing, even to a man as protected as this. But the next instant something happened which changed the entire course of things.

"I'll go home alone," he murmured. "Go home and think about my mines in South America. They're more interesting than this—this kind of thing. By George, I think I'll go down there again with young Evesham."

"Who? What did you say?"

He turned, and his lazy glance flickered over her for a minute, taking in her suddenly brightened eyes, her lips half parted.

"Evesham. Jerry Evesham. A young fellow I hire for nothing to run one of the smaller mines between revolutions."

Jerry's boss—the man who had given Jerry his job—Adrian Martin! Adrian Martin with his millions, Jerry with his pittance! To do something for the man you love, to ask a favor as a woman, to have that secret surprise waiting for Jerry when he came back! And all at once she was a thousand times more interested in Adrian Martin than she had ever dreamed of being.

"Wait! Don't go. I want to ask you something. About—about Mr. Evesham."

He slowly shook his head. "I refuse to stay here any longer. I asked you to come home with me, and you turned me down. The offer is still open."

His smile was inscrutable. For a breathless instant she hesitated. To do something for Jerry, to get a perfectly splendid job for him, just by being agreeable for an hour! And after all, she wasn't afraid, and no harm would come of it. As he said, he wanted to show her how mild he could be. Impulses—impulses driving you this way and that—but they made you live, they made things happen!

She gave him a quick, answering smile. "Very well," she said.

She bowed to Mrs. Drake, an old, wearied dragon of a woman fighting hard to hold her place as the first field marshal of American society. As for Carlotta, there was no sign of her, and if Carlotta, with her variegated moods, were having a good time, she had probably forgotten at this moment that Margie existed.

Adrian Martin and she went down the flight of steps that led to the iron gates. Footmen came forward, the gates swung, a big blue car drove softly up, and she had settled herself back in its roomy dimness.

To Be Continued.

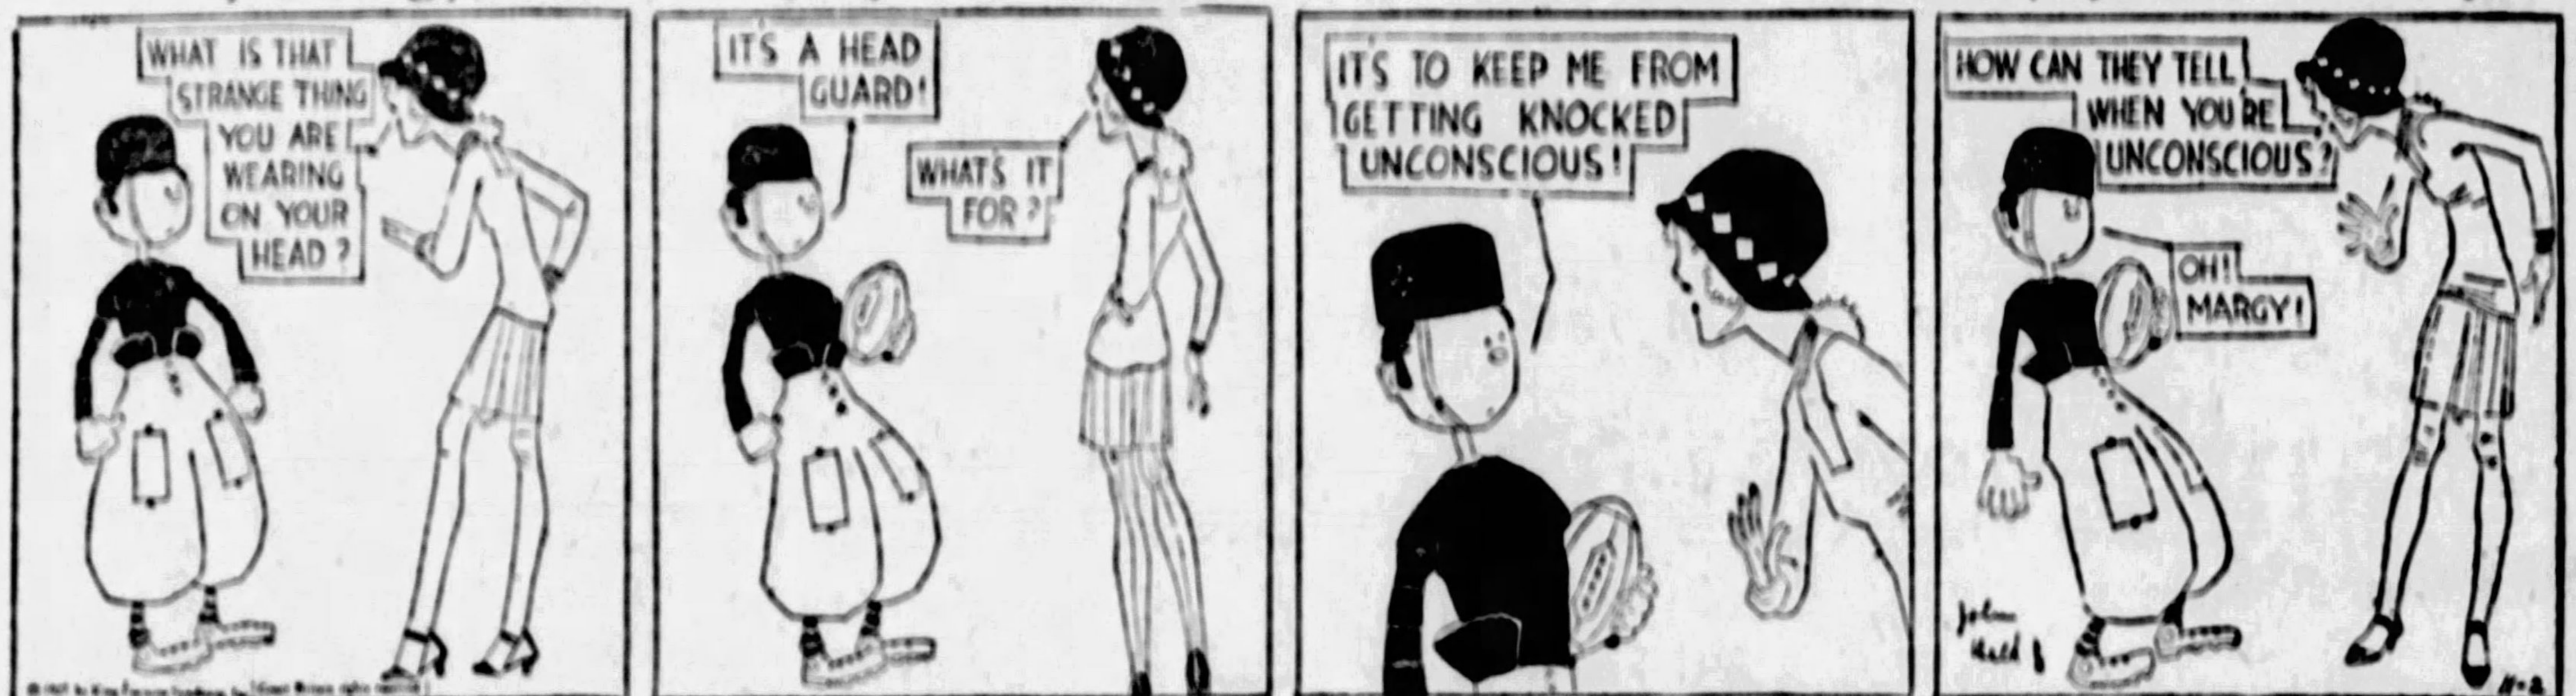
Merely Margy, An Awfully Sweet Girl

Story by Lloyd Mayer

By John Held, Jr.



WHAT IS THAT STRANGE THING YOU ARE WEARING ON YOUR HEAD?
IT'S A HEAD GUARD!
WHAT'S IT FOR?
IT'S TO KEEP ME FROM GETTING KNOCKED UNCONSCIOUS!
HOW CAN THEY TELL WHEN YOU'RE UNCONSCIOUS?
OH! MARGY!
John Held Jr.

"My dear, I'm all-of-a-TOT-and-JITtle—I ACtually AM, because HAVE you GAZED upon ARab in his FOOTball get-up? You HAVEN'T? Well, my dear, you've actually never SEEN such an unCOUTH SPECtacle in all your born DAYS, my dear, because he HONestly looks like NOTHing Human—you know the TYPE! Well, ANYways, I don't think hardly ANY boys I know really look awfully WELL in these peculiar FOOTball haBILIments because I mean they really don't FLATter you, but when a youth is awfully sort of good-LOOKing and VIRile I think he can get aWAY with donning the MOLEskins or whatever you call them but when a boy has a physignominy like ARab's he ought to be terribly sort of CAREful what he puts ON, because after ALL, my dear, clothes sort of HELP, don't you really think they DO? I mean I know HEAPS of girls who aren't really a BIT atTRACtive but I mean they get aWAY like a BREEZE because the way they DRESS is awfully SNAPpy, only PERsonally I think LOADS of girls think enTIREly too much of apPEARances and are just CONsecrated on CLOTHES and things, which I think is SIMply AWful because I think a girl ought to REALize that just being FRIVolous doesn't get you a THING and you ought to be SErious-minded—I mean I ACtually DO!"

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By ADELE GARRISON

Katie Makes a Discovery About the Red Bearded Man

THE perturbation brought to me by Mary's naive comment upon Philip Veritzen's deference to my judgment increased instead of lessening as I thought over her words after her departure. Indeed I finally found that it was making me most reluctant to keep my appointment upon the morrow with my employer—I grimly reminded myself that I would better call him that, mentally, at least, even though he had objected so strenuously to my use of the term.

But there was no alternative for me now, unless I wished to throw up my work altogether. I had promised Mr. Veritzen by wireless that I would keep the appointment he wished, to go over the plans he had brought from Europe. I knew that his arrogance and his egotistical sensitiveness would accept no excuse for my failure to appear at his offices.

If it had been in the old days, when Dicky and I, no matter what our quarrels, yet had been lovers, I think that in this moment of troubled fearful speculation as to Philip Veritzen's possible future attitude toward me, I should have decided not to keep the appointment even though it meant breaking my contract.

But the estrangement between Dicky and me was based upon so terrible a thing—his belief, even though but for a brief period, that I was trying to poison him—that I knew there was but little hope of ever bridging the chasm between us which had resulted from it. And to me it was unthinkable that I should be economically dependent upon my husband if things should so shape themselves that life together in our home even under the present unnatural and trying conditions should become unendurable.

No, I must not throw over the high position in the Veritzen forces I had won and kept with arduous work based upon my training of years in teaching history. Not yet, at least. I could imagine conditions which would force me to such a renunciation, but so far, there was nothing save my own fearful fancies to justify such a course.

But it was with a distinctly depressed spirit that I made my preparations for my early journey in the morning, for the only train which would get me into the city in time for my appointment left the neighboring station at 6 o'clock. When Katie's unmistakable tattoo sounded on my door I welcomed it eagerly. Whatever she might be bringing me, mirth or vexation, it would be a diversion from my own troublesome thoughts.

That the interview would furnish me amusement, I was sure when my little maid entered with a mysterious air which would have done credit to her favorite movie detective. I felt sure that she would have liked to shield her face with a fold of a black cloak as she slunk into the room, looked all around it for a possible third person and then whispered:

"Plees, Missis Graham, you lock door qveeck."

I was glad of the opportunity to hide the twitching of my lips as I obeyed her, but I controlled my mirth rigidly as I turned back to where she stood, watching me intently.

"Vot you tink?" she demanded in a stage whisper. "You know you told me to find out vot I could about dose men from Meester Grimsey's shack. Vell! I found sometings, I'll tell cockeyed vorld!"

I had no remembrance of giving Katie any such direction, but guessed that she had interpreted liberally my instructions to her at the time the men were talking to Jim and I wished to find out what nationality they were. But I was not sorry to be informed of any new development concerning our queer, new neighbors.

"What did you discover, Katie?" I asked encouragingly.

"I found out dot red-headed fellow, he have false vig—I no tink hees hair red, und I tink he been vot you call—servant to Meester Graham ven he in var. He act shoost like on stage ven Meester Graham talk by heem."

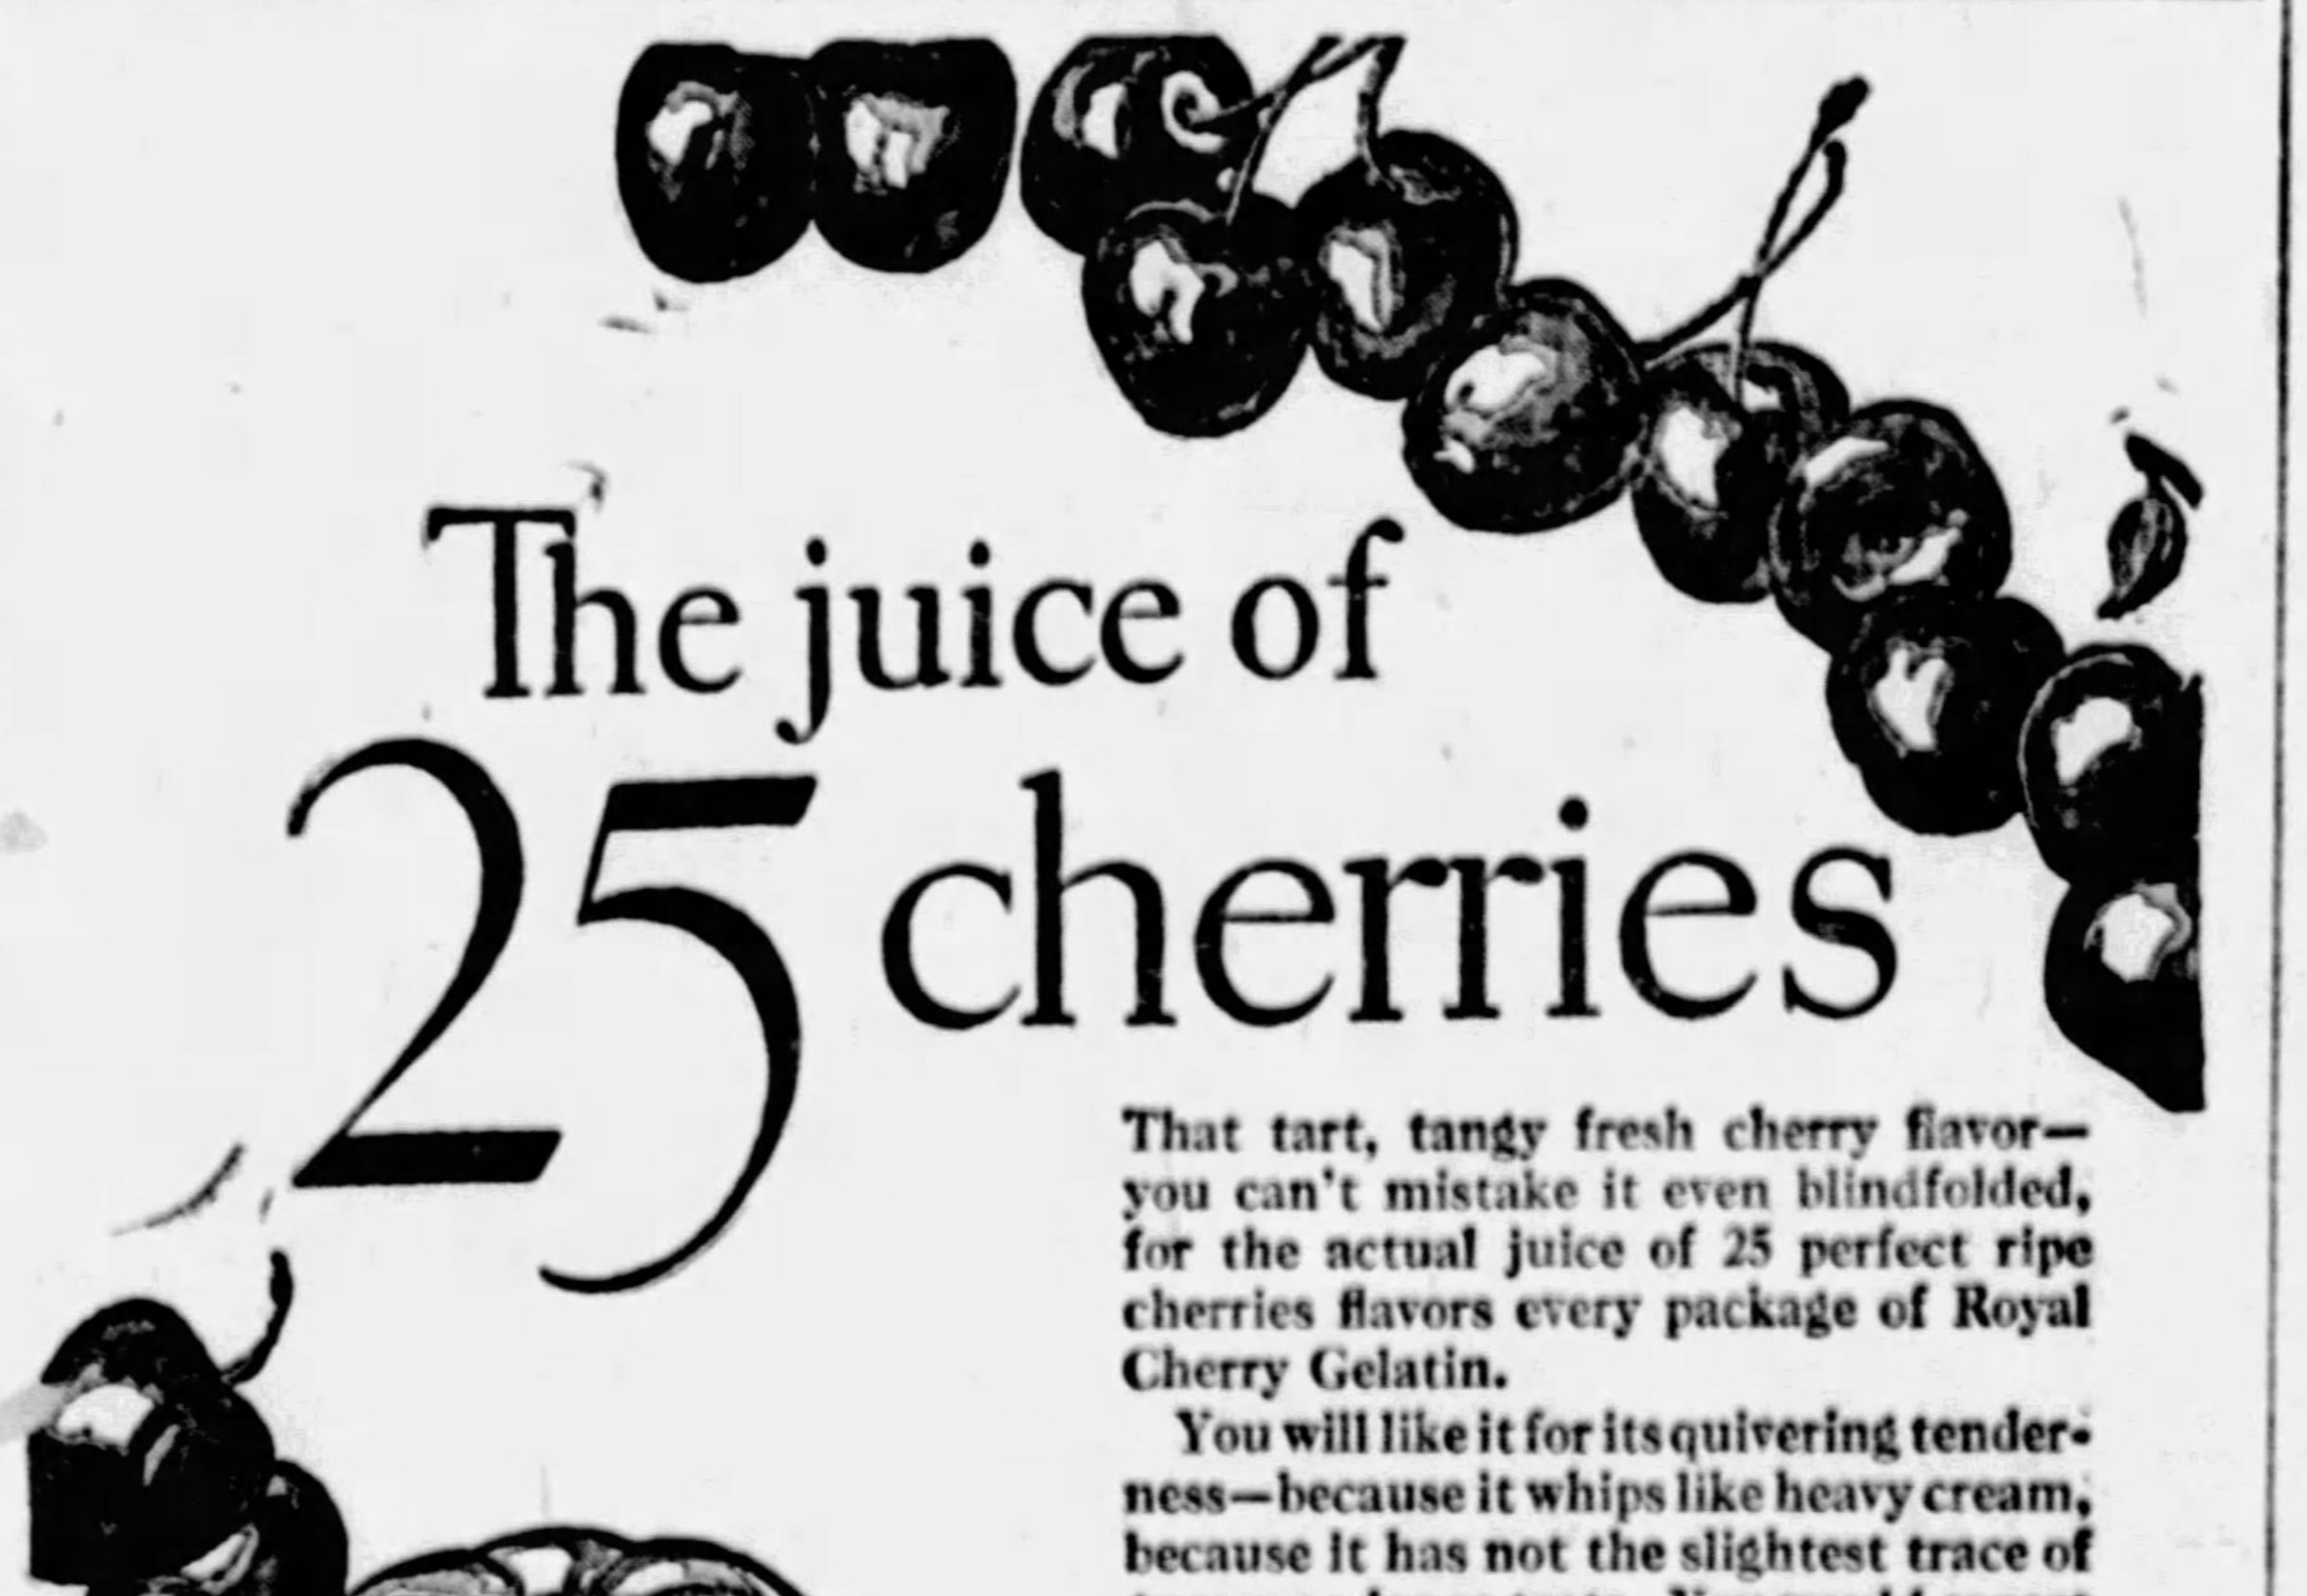
Beauty Hints
Protect your beauty in all kinds of weather with this new face powder—MELLO-GLO. Does not give the skin a dry feeling; does not clog the pores; is not affected so much by perspiration. Stays on longer. So pure and fine. MELLO-GLO is made by a new French process. It's truly wonderful.



The juice of 25 cherries
That tart, tangy fresh cherry flavor—you can't mistake it even blindfolded, for the actual juice of 25 perfect ripe cherries flavors every package of Royal Cherry Gelatin.
You will like it for its quivering tenderness—because it whips like heavy cream, because it has not the slightest trace of gummy odor or taste. You would expect this superiority of texture and flavor of a product made by the makers of Royal Baking Powder. Yet it costs no more.
Children adore Royal Cherry Gelatin plain or whipped or molded with fruit. Four other fresh fruit flavors: Raspberry, Strawberry, Orange and Lemon.

A nice selection, Mother—But what price "convenience?"
"THREE different sets and we are to select one, eh! A lot of mighty fine silver to keep in the house tonight. I wonder how these stores do it? Who pays for the convenience of 'home selection'? There must be thousands and thousands of dollars worth of rugs, furniture, clothing, silverware, household goods and all sorts of things in homes in this town tonight that won't be sent back for a week."
Every merchant knows that there are times when it is necessary to send merchandise for approval in the home. He sends it out with the understanding that, if not satisfactory, it will at least come back promptly. What every merchant seeks to avoid is the abuse of the return privilege, an abuse that entails needless operations and adds to the cost of doing business. You are asked to do your part in selecting carefully and returning goods only when necessary.

KDKA TONIGHT TO CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY

KDKA, the pioneer radio broadcasting station, tonight will observe its completion of seven years of broadcasting with a special anniversary program, which will again bring to the listeners H. P. Davis, vice president of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, known as the "Father of Radio Broadcasting."

The Westinghouse Band, directed by T. J. Vastine, the first unit of musicians to broadcast, will open the anniversary program at 6 o'clock. The KDKA Little Symphony Orchestra, which was organized by its present conductor, Victor Saudek, shortly after KDKA began operations, also will participate in the program, as will these pioneer broadcasters: Edgar Thomson Steel Works Quartet, which first sang in an improvised studio at the Westinghouse plant; R. V. B. Trio, Allan B. Davis, baritone; Jim Hughes and Miss Emma Bishop; Will Rhodes, tenor; Frederick G. Rodgers, baritone; Etta G. Cunningham, soprano, and members of the faculties of the Pittsburgh Musical Institute and the University of Pittsburgh. J. C. McQuiston will be in charge of the program which will continue until 8 o'clock and from 10 to 11 o'clock.

KDKA'S first great achievement, that of broadcasting the Harding-Cox election returns November 2, 1920, has been followed by many accomplishments, including the first broadcast of church services and the first descriptive reports of a boxing match and a baseball game.

DENIES LEGALITY OF STATE TAX

By Universal Service

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2—The War Department yesterday denied the right of the State of Alabama to impose a tax on power manufactured at the government-owned Muscle Shoals plant.

In reply to a letter from the State Tax Commission requesting payment of an assessment, Secretary Davis informed him that the Supreme Court had ruled that the Federal government is exempt from such levies. He added that if the state believed that the decision is not applicable, the matter would be given further attention.

DRINK WATER IF BACK OR KIDNEYS HURT

Too much rich food forms acids which excite and overwork the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Flush the kidneys occasionally to relieve them like you relieve the bowels, removing acids, waste and poison, else you may feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, the stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get irritated, obliging one to get up two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste, begin drinking water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine and bladder disorders disappear.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help prevent serious kidney and bladder disorders.

Annoying Night Coughs

Stopped Almost Instantly

Very frequently adults and children, especially children, have spells of night coughing due to bronchial irritations or while suffering from colds. These coughing spells, if not quickly checked, are very injurious to the health.

A famous physician's prescription called Thoxine, much better than patent medicines and cough syrups, acts on a different principle, relieves the irritation and stops the cough within 15 minutes or money back. Contains no chloroform, dope or other harmful drugs. Pleasant tasting and safe. 35c, 60c and $1.00. Ask for Thoxine. At all druggists.

Greatest of his Great Historical Novels

"THE SUN HAWK"

Courageous love pitted against the intrigue of a corrupt court

"THE SUN HAWK" blazes a trail of love, intrigue, and adventure. A stirring romance of Frontenac's cavaliers, the violent, stubborn, lovable French adventurer. The hero, an unknown English lad, handsome, fearless. From Turkish flames and slaughter he rescues a lovely daughter of the French court—only to see her ....? This fascinating tale unfolds against the background of the court of Louis XIV and the opening of the New World.

Robert W. Chambers' historical novels are considered his finest work. The SUN HAWK is the greatest of them all. Don't miss the opening installment in the November Pictorial.

The prize novel "Rebellion." A gay story by Dorothy Speare: More good fiction. "The Trouble with Women," Beauty Hints, six Home Making articles, 12 pages of fashions, a wealth of interesting reading.

All these and much more for 15 cents

Is Marriage Doomed? Is Lasting Love Possible?

Dr. Will Durant, outstanding philosopher and popular lecturer whose "Story of Philosophy" is the best seller of non-fiction books, writes for the November Pictorial. Read the "BREAKDOWN OF MARRIAGE." It is a fine, courageous analysis of the institution of marriage, its history, its meaning, the repeated failure of many modern marriages. He shows us why it seems to be on the verge of breaking down,—why it must not be allowed to break down. What he has to say is new and startlingly candid.

WILL DURANT

From Brooklyn Slums to a Beverly Hills Mansion

How does it feel to win a Beauty Contest?—to sign a movie contract?—to tramp the streets from studio to studio?

The quicksands of Hollywood are strewn with girls who have been called "the most beautiful in the world." In the November Pictorial Jim Tully tells the fascinating life story of Clara Bow, the exception whose genius and fire lifted her to stardom. A modern fairy story, sad, gay, fascinating. Be sure you don't miss this story of a modern Nell Gwynn in the November Pictorial.

TIGERS LOCK GATES

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 2.—Coach Bill Roper sent his Princeton squad through their practice yesterday behind closed gates, locked even to the press. It was learned afterwards that Roper had ordered one of the severest scrimmages of the season. With Ohio State on the schedule next Saturday and Yale following, Roper does not intend to spare his team.

THROUGH the SPORT LENS

by HAVEY BOYLE

HAVEY BOYLE

IN THE Carnegie Tech game Charley Edwards, the excellent Pitt quarterback, was hurt almost as soon as the boys went to the post, and Fisher, another good quarterback, was rushed to the relief. In that game Fisher showed he can do something besides run interference, as he carried the ball after the fashion of the fast mail passing through Podunk. Fisher showed such talent in that game that the Panther bosses were ready to give Edwards all the time he needed to recover. Now Fisher comes up with an injury just before the most important game on the schedule—that with Wash-Jeff—and Jock Sutherland has been forced to the extreme measure of making a second-string fullback (Fyock) into a first string quarterback. One good feature, if any can be found by Pitt eyes, is that Welch, the captain, calls the signals at the halfback position, but this fact, of course, does not make up for the loss of two such capable men as Fisher and Edwards.

THERE is no doubt about the seriousness of the situation, although Wash-Jeff authorities will wink a little at the stories now coming out of the Pitt camp. There is always a chance that an injured man, reported completely out, sets the boys to holding onto their caps, when he dashes out unexpectedly to day, and this may happen in the oming game, but if either Fisher Edwards recover the Pitt bosses ill be surprised.

HE Panthers' greatest handicap, it seems here, however, will from the absence of Booth, the ack, who is one of the very st in the country on the offensive. Parkinson, a better defensive man, has not yet the power and drive of Dick Booth.

READING all this the boys from Washington, Pa., may be tempted to come out with a few stories of a similar nature, the while they discount the singing of the blues at Pitt.

However Andy Kerr will not be deluded into any feeling of great safety even if he were told the whole 11 regulars of the Panthers were hobbling around on crutches. Andy will have no trouble in impressing his talented team that no matter who is in the Pitt lineup or who is out of it the Wash-Jeff boys can always count on just a little stronger tackling and running than they have seen all year.

IT'S going to be too bad if Jock Sutherland cannot throw his best lineup into the coming game, for with both clubs primed the game stands to be one of the greatest in years—anywhere. If the grave fears at Pitt now stand up right until game time, Wash-Jeff must go in as a favorite, for as the teams stands, full equipped, they are on even terms. The slightest depreciation in strength on one side or the other may be the thing that will swing the tide of battle to the side with no depreciation of strength.

SPORT COMMENT

State and slightly outplayed W. & J. in a scoreless game that the visitors had been expected to win.

Now Sutherland has a team which he made himself, composed of players who never had any college coaching save that which Jock and his staff gave them, and its record to date evidences a consistent strength that has made it noticed all over the country.

THE eleven's outstanding characteristics are versatility and dash; its scoring weapons are more varied, rhaps, than those of any previous tt team, excelled by very few teams y year at any school, and it vith a fire and drive that are nly in first-class teams. 1927 Panthers are ample e of the sound judgment and to instruct of the man who, one of the great players in -16-17 that ever wore the d Gold, came back to his own to take up the thankless task ling the shoes of the great master strategist of the game.

Sutherland's friends are saying, and not without warrant, that no man could have been found anywhere who would have come closer to doing that.

"SATURDAY'S game will be a line fight," says a Western Pennsylvania coach of wide reputation, who is as interested in the coming battle between the Panthers and Presidents as are many thousands of his fellow citizens.

"Both teams have splendid backfields, and they are of approximately even strength," he continued. "This game will be won in the line where W. & J. is much heavier and Pitt a trifle better balanced. If I knew the answer in advance I could make my fortune this week."

This observer goes on to remark that IF the Panther forwards can hold their own, even, the local lads will win, for he esteems the running attacks of the two teams as just about equal, and thinks that if the Pitt line can give the Blue and Gold backs enough help to bring up the W. & J. secondary defense, the Panthers' splendid forward-passing attack will give them a decided edge.

Lions "Made" By Confidence

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Nov. 2.—Shades of the great teams that represented Penn State in its championship years of 1919 to 1921 are stalking across the historic gridiron of the Nittany Valley. The spark of winning spirit, missing among the Lions for so many seasons, seems to be rekindled in the 1927 edition of Hugo Bezdek's eleven. The Lion of 1927, as befits a king of beasts, is once more a roaring rampant figure.

Students and graduates who have watched Penn State teams for the past nine years are comparing the present team to the winning combinations molded in the days of Killinger, Higgins, Way and Light Horse Harry Wilson. The same confidence that imbued the Lions of a half a dozen years ago is back in the Nittany fold. The biggest asset of the Penn State championship teams was a feeling that they could not be beaten, and the present team feels much the same way.

After the defeat by Bucknell the change became apparent. On the Monday following that defeat the players reported with a different attitude and a different notion of what they ought to do in daily practice. All of that work and in the last three weeks the players have become roaring Lions again. They swept through Penn, Syracuse and Lafayette and are now going after George Washington as though the national championship depended upon that game. George Washington is undefeated to date and boasts a better record than the Lions so far as games won and lost is concerned, although some of its opponents have not been of the caliber of the teams that State has beaten.

his Panthers for the W. & J. game Saturday. He is almost set on his intention of starting Dwight Fyock at quarterback, and has been working him at that position for the past two days. Fyock is one of the fastest men on the squad, and is the best man to lead interference for Welch, for the simple reason that he is about the only one able to remain in front of Gibby long enough to get past the line.

Carnegie Tech will leave tomorrow night for New York and the game with Chick Meehan's Violets of New York University Saturday. The squad will arrive in Gotham Friday morning and will remain in the city instead of going out-of-town to a country club as was the method of procedure last year. Tech is to drill on the Polo Grounds gridiron Friday afternoon.

SPECIAL TRAIN FOR DUKES

Arrangements for the chartering of a special train to convey approximately 500 Duquesne grid fans to Johnstown are about completed, according to Manager John Holohan, and indications are that Layden's Bluffites will not want for support when they oppose St. Francis in the Flood City Stadium Saturday afternoon.

SHOTS and PASSES

by Julius Levin

THE Goldenson Furnitures of the South Side, who withdrew from the Allegheny County League to compete in the Pittsburgh and Ohio Valley League this winter, expect to open their schedule against the Morry Cadets at Braddock on November 21.

Two newcomers will make their debut with the Goldensons this winter, Charles (Chuck) Jackson, former South High School star, and "Pal" Longwin, well-known independent flash, having turned out for Bill Magidson's quintet.

Pusateris, another well-known South Side star, is seeking a regular position at guard. During his day at South High Pusateri ranked with the best in local scholastic circles and Manager Magidson is expecting much from him this winter.

RAY LaCARIO has been obtained to coach the Goodwill Midgets, composed of youngsters of the Lawrenceville district. Manager Mrozowski is arranging an attractive schedule for his passers and is eager to meet the best midget teams operating in this vicinity.

The Goodwill team made a good showing in the Allegheny Mountain Association tournament last winter and will be out this year to cop the championship of its class.

THE management of the Pittsburgh Tech basketball team has opened negotiations for an intersectional game to be played in Decatur, Ill., with one of the leading Catholic High schools of the Middle West. This game is planned for the first of the year. The Decatur quintet is regarded in western basketball circles as one of the best floor machines in that section of the country. This game should prove one of the highlights of the Pittsburgh Tech schedule.

THE Pittsburgh and Ohio Valley League and other circuits being organized by J. J. Freund, Jr., will meet tonight in Kaufmann's to complete plans for the 1927-1928 campaign. Teams interested in obtaining franchises are invited to attend tonight's meeting. Representatives are asked to use the Fifth avenue entrance.

DRIBBLES

Kinzel has been elected captain of the Penn Five of Sharpsburg, which has been entered in the Central League. He will hold down the regular position at center.

The A. L. Walsh Club of the North Side, will enter its sixth season as a basketball team this winter, stronger than ever. This club is eager to arrange games with light first-class teams, especially those enrolled in the Central and Metropolitan leagues. Call Cedar 4394-R and ask for Kosty.

Meyer Goldenson, prominent South Side sportsman, is well pleased with the showing his Vanities, a girls' team, which will play all preliminary games at the South Side Market House. This team includes in its roster some of the leading girl passers on the South Side.

William Magidson, manager of the Goldensons, has dates open on his schedule for light first-class teams. Teams interested in booking this attraction write him at 1214 Carson street, or call Hemlock 2558 or 1142.

The Webster Hall quintet will receive its baptism of first-class basketball Friday night when it opposes the Diamond National Bank team in a practice game at Webster Hall. The Diamond National team is enrolled in the Pittsburgh Bankers' League. The C. J. McBrides have been obtained to play all preliminary games at Webster Hall this winter.

FIGHT RESULTS

At Los Angeles—Midget Mike O'Dowd defeated Young Nationalista, 10 rounds.

At San Francisco — Tom Elliott knocked out Douglas Simpson to win Far-Western amateur heavyweight title, 2 rounds.

At Milan—Quadrini, Italian featherweight champion, defeated Scillie, European champion; bout between Ermino Spalla and Jack Taylor canceled.

At Reading, Pa.—Joe Kuhns defeated Pete Petrolle, 8 rounds; Mickey Diamond and Buck Doyle drew, 8 rounds.

At Harrisburg, Pa.—Harry (Kid) Wallace defeated Johnny Hayes, 8 rounds; Chick Liadell knocked out Kid Cottman, 3 rounds.

At New Haven, Conn.—Louis (Kid) Kaplan defeated Mike Dundee, 12 rounds; Bobby Mays scored technical knockout over Pep O'Brien, 5 rounds; Joey LaGrey defeated Lew Freedman, 9 rounds.

At Chicago—Mickey Walker, world's middleweight champion, knocked out Mike McTigue, former light-heavyweight champion, 1 round; Phil Mecurio defeated Jackie Williams, 6 rounds; Roleaux Saguero knocked out Benny Ross, 2 rounds; Abe Bain defeated George (Wop) Manolian, 6 rounds; Joe O'Malley and Johnny Sherrod drew, 6 rounds.

At Indianapolis—Johnny Deering defeated Johnny Tillman, 10 rounds; Didley Ring defeated Irving Goldberg, 8 rounds.

At Des Moines, Ia.—Morrie Schlaifer knocked out Joe Yanger, 4 rounds; Erwin Bige defeated Eddie Debeau, 10 rounds; Pinky George defeated Harold Jelsma, 10 rounds.

At Columbus — Red Fitzsimmons knocked out Quintin Romero-Rojas, 1 round.

At Fresno, Cal.—Young Corbett knocked out Dave Cook, 2 rounds.

SEIFERT, ROCCO REMATCHED

Sandy Seifert, North Side heavyweight, is to fight Emmett Rocco, the fine young prospect of Ellwood City, again at Youngstown. Rocco recently was credited with outpointing his more experienced opponent in a bout in the same village.

Sandy left last night for New York to train for the bout. He said he would be in better condition this time and hoped to win decisively over the youngster who has knocked out Quintin Romer-Rojas, Joe Burke, Sailor Maxted and others. The North Sider has no big fellows to work out with while preparing for the initial go with Rocco, but will have plenty of sparring mates in the big town.

The return bout is scheduled for Friday night of next week.

Cuddy DeMarco, who returned yesterday from Milwaukee, where he won on a foul over Harry Kahn, and Chicago, where he was not permitted to fight because of a New Jersey ban hanging over him, left this morning for Clarksburg, W. Va., where he meets a Young Jack Dempsey tonight.

Jimmy Slattery, recognized as the light-heavyweight champion by the National Boxing Commission, boxes Murray Gitlitz in Buffalo tonight. Jimmy Goodrich, former lightweight champion, meets Izzy Grove in a six-round bout in New York.

The card has been completed for the boxing show at McKeesport tomorrow night with the arranging of the two six-round preliminaries. Marty Hale of McKeesport boxes Tiger Joe Randall of Duquesne in the second bout and Darrell States and Richard Gibbons, McKeesport heavies, meet in the opener. Harry Dudley and Alex Simms are the wind-up principals, and Jackie Murray and Tom Phillips will clash in the eight-round semi-final.

Ace Hudkins says he will quit the ring if he loses to Joe Dundee in their world's welterweight championship bout in Los Angeles tomorrow night. "I'll quit while I have my health," the Wildcat, who takes considerable punishment in his bouts, declared.

Young Pisani, of Mt. Washington, will substitute for Freddie Boylstein, of New Kensington, against K. O. Perry, of McKeesport, in the 10-round main bout of a show at Kittanning tonight.

EDGEWOOD CLUB FETES CADDIES

Almost 200 caddies of the Edgewood Country Club were dined and honored in its clubhouse last night, bringing to an end months of eager anticipation on the part of the youngsters.

Shortly after 6 o'clock the lads were called into the clubhouse and seated. There were even more than had been expected. Members of the Edgewood club, including Harry Wilhelm, J. B. Flenniken, Herbert F. Miller, Jr., Dr. W. L. Thunhurst, F. A. Power, Mrs. Harry Wilhelm and Mrs. F. A. Power, along with members of the clubhouse staff and Mr. and Mrs. Herb Lawson, the former club professional, and Jimmy O'Donnell, caddie master, rushed madly about the spacious rooms, breaking a deep trail to and from the kitchen, endeavoring to provide enough food to satisfy the bag-carriers.

breakdown, according to word from Saltsburg. Friends of Jim who had heard he was out playing golf while his team was battling the Pitt freshmen at Saltsburg last Saturday were amazed and made hurried inquiry to determine what had happened to him, for this is very much unlike James Lafayette Marks. What they learned was that Jim was recovering from a bit of a breakdown and had been ordered by his doctor to keep away from all excitement, principally the games in which his proteges were engaging.

THE Pitt-W. & J. game at the Stadium Saturday will be broadcast by both KDKA and WJAS. Louis L. Kaufman will announce for KDKA, with Percy F. Boyd assisting him. H. B. Davis, assisted by H. E. Clark, make up the WJAS combination. WJAS will go on the air at 1:45 and KDKA at 2 p. m. Both broadcasts will be made direct from the press box in the Stadium. The Penn-Harvard game at Philadelphia will be broadcast by the National Broadcasting Company, with Graham MacNamee at the microphone.

IF IT were not for the fact that Mike McTigue took so much punishment during the short time his bout with Mickey Walker at Chicago last night lasted, boxing fans might be excused if they pointed the finger of suspicion toward the battle, for Walker is anxious to avoid defending his middleweight crown by going out after bigger stuff, and such a dramatic and quick victory over a cagy veteran on the order of McTigue naturally paves the way for such an event. Ordinarily, McTigue is too smart a defensive boxer to be caught napping with a surprise attack such as Walker launched, but it may be that last night Manager Jack Kearns had Mickey pepped up for one of those Jack Dempsey starts. Defeat at this stage means nothing to McTigue, who easily could be used as a stepping-stone for Walker. Stranger things have happened.

DUNDEE-HUDKINS ODDS NOW AT EVEN MONEY

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—The dollars and cents barometer of fight forecasters indicated today a rising confidence in the ability of Joe Dundee to repulse tomorrow night the title challenge of the Nebraska Wildcat, Ace Hudkins.

Odds that in many quarters 10 days ago favored Hudkins to take the welterweight crown from the Baltimore Italian have disappeared and in their place even money reigned.

a coat collar that fits at the neck!

Sometimes the trouble has been in the build of the man, more often in the build of the coat—but what a rarity it has been, in years gone by, to get a coat that actually did hug the neck as a coat should!

This Fall, Society Brand has brought out a new, exclusive feature, the Snug-Ease Shoulder, which actually does away with the old sagging shoulder and collar.

Customers of ours who have tried it, call it the greatest improvement in clothes in twenty years. We believe you'll say the same. It's here in all the Society Brand suits and overcoats for Fall.

Society Brand Clothes

There's more value in a Society Brand Suit at $50.00 than can ordinarily be bought in other lines of merchandise at several dollars more. A strong statement, yet true. Production on a large scale brings down the cost of any article, and Society Brands are the most sought after Style Clothes in America. They base their fame chiefly on these three exclusive, individual fabrics:

Piping Rocks
Bristol Stripes and Haddons

Although Society Brand Clothes are sold by leading clothiers from coast to coast, it remains for the Kaufmann & Baer Company to show one of the most elaborate, most complete stocks in the land. Ask to try on a Society Brand model that will fit you as though custom-made, and bring out your personality as though you had picked the fabric and supervised the designing of the suit in person.

Titian-haired left wing, who expects to show his oldtime form for Odie Cleghorn's hockey Pirates this winter. Duke has been training diligently for the last two weeks and says he will be in much better shape to start the 1927-28 campaign than he was last winter, when his studies at Pitt kept him from taking part in most of the early-season workouts. He plans to give Ty Arbour and a few other candidates a hot run for the regular berth. The Pirate skaters will have their first workout on the Duquesne Garden ice tonight.

Armour, Hagen Lead

CEDARCREST COUNTRY CLUB, DALLAS, Tex., Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Tommy Armour, of Washington, D. C., national open champion, took a lead of 1 up over Tom Harmon, Yonkers, N. Y., at the end of the first nine holes in the second round of the Professional Golfers' Association tournament here today.

Harmon had chances to win the first and second when his approaches were inside Armour's, but his putter failed him on both greens and holes were halved in par. He made up for this at the third when he played a beautiful shot to the edge of the green from behind a clump of trees and sank a 8-foot putt for a birdie. The New Yorker ran into difficulties, however, losing the fifth. He won the sixth and then lost the seventh and the ninth holes.

Shooting a 33, two under par, Walter Hagen, the defending champion, ended the first nine holes six up on Anthony Manero, New York, and appeared to be on his way to an overwhelming victory. Hagen missed a hole in one at the second green by inches.

John Turnesa, of New York, caught a tartar in Willie Klein, of East Williston, New York. Turnesa was perfect par on the first three holes, but Klein caught two birdies and was two up.

After losing the third hole, Morte Dutra, Portland, Ore., came back and won the next six in his match with Charles Guest, Hollywood, Cal., to go five up at the turn.

Gene Sarazen, New York, turned the ninth one up on Ed Dudley, of Vannuys, Cal., and Al Espinosa, Chicago, was one up on Harry Cooper, of Los Angeles.

Klein continued to set a fast pace for Turnesa and came to the eighth tee five up, but Turnesa rallied to take the ninth hole. Turnesa, after parring the first three holes, wilted and took a 42 on the nine. Klein scored a 38.

ALL CLUBS BALLOT ON NEW LEADER

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—E. S. Barnard, president of the Cleveland Indians, today was unanimously elected president of the American Baseball League, succeeding Ban Johnson, resigned.

Transfer of the Cleveland club would not be completed today, it was indicated by Alva Bradley, head of the purchasing syndicate. It developed that one of the holders of Cleveland Ballot Club was in London and W. J. Garvey, of Chicago, had not granted an option upon his holdings.

Bradley said that if Garvey granted an option and a favorable reply also was received from the man in London he would meet Mrs. James Dunn, chief owner of the club, this afternoon and make down payments to bind the bargain.

McTigue Bows to Walker

By WARREN BROWN,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—In exactly two minutes and 15 seconds of as furious punching as has ever been seen in a Chicago ring Mickey Walker, middleweight champion of the world, last night battered into utter helplessnes Mike McTigue, the former leader of the light heavyweights. And it was fully five minutes after the bout had come to its sudden and spectacular finish before McTigue was able to look up from where he was sprawled on a chair in Walker's corner and take anything like a lively interest in what was going on about him.

Four times in that furious two-thirds of a round McTigue was dropped. Twice he hung helplessly across the lower rope of the ring. Three times he struggled to his feet, his game old spirit carrying him on. As rapidly as he was up, Walker, rushing from his post in the distant corner, was on him, and his savage right hand crushed home. There followed a flurry of Walker punches, rights and lefts, all to the jaw. The blood spurted from Mike's face, his knees sagged and eventually he went down.

There was no withstanding the avalanche of leather that was hurtling at him last night.

When McTigue had dropped for the fourth time, a certainty to be counted out, his manager, Jimmy Johnston, tossed in the sponge.

McTigue fell for the final time in Walker's own corner. It was utterly impossible to drag the fallen gladiator across the ring to his own corner, and it was fully five minutes after that before the first aid of Johnston and the wrecking crew had revived Mike enough for him to pose for a picture with his conqueror.

Jack Kearns, Walker's manager, was in his element after this sensational win of the middleweight championship, and when last seen—or heard—he was saying something that sounded like:

"Bring on Dempsey."

In the semi-windup, which wasn't staged until after the Walker-McTigue doings, Roleaux Saguero, the Cuban, registered his third straight knockout, locally. His victim this time was Benny Ross of Buffalo.

When Referee Dave Barry came into the ring to handle the second bout of the evening, his appearance was the signal for a terrific uproar, one part of the house cheering, the other booing the man who had figured so prominently in the Tunney-Dempsey fight.

COMMITTEE FAVORS ELIS OR LIONS

By JESS CARVER.

THE Pasadena Tournament of Roses committee, those gentlemen who have the inviting of Eastern and Western football teams for the annual Rose Bowl game in hand, have denied that the winner of the Pitt-W. & J. or the Pitt-Penn State games will be asked to represent the East against the pick of the West New Year's Day.

In fact, word from the coast has it that neither Pitt or W. & J. may be invited, but that the choice may be made from Yale, Penn State or Princeton. The Western eleven will be one of three, Southern California, California or Stanford.

Of course, the possibility of Pitt or W. & J. being asked to jaunt out to the coast is strong. Of the five teams in the East most likely to get the call—Pitt, Penn State, Princeton, Yale and W. & J. only two can survive what may well be named the elimination series. Princeton and Yale have to play each other and one of the two is almost certain to fall. Pitt plays W. & J. and Penn State, and if the Panthers can take both into camp, then the locals are certain to be worthy of the highest rating in the East, providing Penn State defeated New York U.

Yale is going to be be a favorite over Princeton next week, for the simple reason that Yale is one of the three strongest elevens in the East, despite the fact that Geor[illegible] defeated the Blue.

And while on the subject, [illegible] overlook this Georgia team. In[illegible] dition to its victory over Yale, Crackers downed the Crimson of Alabama, which is quite a [illegible] in itself.

BROTHER VS. BROTHER

There is one angle to the Tournament of Roses game which must not be overlooked. It has been rumored on the coast that Yale and Southern California will be the teams to play. If those elevens square off, it will bring brother against brother from the coaches seat, as Howard Jones of U. S. C. and former Iowa mentor is a brother of Tad Jones of Yale. As Tad is planning to retire after this season, it is not at all unlikely that the Bulldogs will get the Eastern invitation.

It is true that the Big Three has not looked upon post-season games with favor, in the past, but don't forget that the Big Three has changed many of its policies in the past couple years, and with Princeton and Harvard still enstranged, the Big Three is little more than a memory.

If Yale gets by Princeton, don't be surprised if the Eli athletic board sanctions a trip to the coast, providing, of course, they get the invitation.

All this talk of the Rose Bowl game is making little or no impression on Jock Sutherland as he prepa

SPEAKING of SPORTS
by HARRY KECK
SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS EDITOR

THE matching of Jack Zivic and Young Saylor for the main bout at Motor Square Garden next Monday night, to take the place of a battle between Walcott Langford of Chicago and Lou Scozza of Buffalo, should be a pleasing move for the local fans. Langford and Scozza probably would have put up a hard fight, but there was little local interest in their meeting, whereas there is a world of interest in a clash between Saylor and Zivic.

Saylor, who never has lost a decision, was virtually matched to box Zivic in the closing show of the last indoor season at Motor Square, in the spring, and was asked to appear in only one more test before being given this plum. That was against Tug Phillips. He got off to a whirlwind start, but tired and Phillips made such a good showing in the last two sessions that the club feared to send Saylor in against the more experienced Zivic the very next week, with the result that it hurriedly arranged to have Cuddy DeMarco box Zivic in a return bout instead.

A FEW weeks ago, the Motor Square promoters again began to talk of a Zivic-Saylor match, and Saylor was asked to appear in two battles to build himself up once more in the estimation of the fans. He responded nobly in his first start, again Lynn Jordan, Negro middleweight of Johnstown, winning handily, and then was sent in against tall, rangy Teddy Esterbrook of Niles, O., Monday night of last week, with the promise that he would get the Zivic match if he won this battle decisively. Once more he went like a house afire from the opening-bell, only to slow down about midway in the bout, with the result that the fans began to pull for Esterbrook and raised a great ruction when the decision in favor of Saylor was announced at the finish. Saylor, with his early lead and good finish, really merited the award, but some of the fans wouldn't be convinced, and Jim Jennings, Esterbrook's manager, became involved in an exhibition of fisticuffs with Referee Eddie Kennedy afterward, which resulted in the arrest and suspension of both.

Saylor should be able to show to much better advantage against an opponent of Zivic's compact build than against a tall foe of the Esterbrook type, especially in view of the fact that Teddy devoted most of his time to grabbing and pinning Saylor's left fist, the Charleroi mixer's best weapon. Saylor's right arm is of little attacking value to him, but he is the most versatile left-hand puncher in captivity in this section.

If Zivic can slow down Saylor long enough to outscore him, he will be doing something no other opponent of the latter, whose real name is Homer Gobert, ever has been able to accomplish. On paper, it certainly is an interesting match, very much more so than the one for which it is subbing.

THE death at Rochester, Minn., yesterday of Spider Kelly recalls some of the tales told of the sagacity of the former lightweight star as a trainer and handler of boxers. His trigger-like thinking in the corner is credited with having turned defeat into victory for some notable battlers in important matches. In his time he was a great little scrapper himself, his most memorable battle having been a 25-round affair with Joe Gans when the Ol' Marster was lightweight champion. Among the men seconded in big bouts by the Spider were John L. Sullivan and Jack Dempsey, the Nonpareil.

Pro Basketball on Ice Floor Now Likely

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—(AP.)—Basketball on an ice floor is Tex Rickard's latest sports novelty.

When the promoter's Original Celtics basketball team of the American Basketball League opens its season at Madison Square Garden November 21 against the Philadelphia Warriors they will be playing, in all probability, on an ice surface.

One of Rickard's employes has discovered that if imitation glass is laid on the terrazo marble base of the floor at Madison Square Garden, and a thin coating of ice placed over that, a surface with the resiliency of rubber is obtained.

Further experiments are being made to determine if the ice will last long enough for a basketball game.

SPORT COMMENT
by JAMES J. LONG

AN interesting feature of Saturday's history-making football game between Pitt and Wash-Jeff is that this year's Panther eleven is the first complete evidence as to the ability of Dr. John B. Sutherland to turn out first-grade elevens for his alma mater.

Coming here in 1924, Coach Sutherland inherited from Pop Warner most of the material for his team, the fact that the major portion of this material consisted of 1923 substitutes causing a slowness in development.

Pitt's team that year started slowly and wound up with a good deal of glory, it will be remembered.

IN 1925, after dropping the second game of the season, Dr. Sutherland produced the strongest aggregation Pitt had had for a number of years, winning seven straight victories from such teams as Pennsylvania, W. & J., Carnegie Tech and Penn State.

There again he had some players who had had their first training under Warner, men such as Gustafson, Wissinger, Brown and Chase, for example, with whom he used several other players who were appearing for the first time on a varsity squad.

Last year, after graduating all save two of his 1925 regulars—Capt. McMillen and Welch—the Pitt mentor faced the impossible task of creating a new team, and at the same time meeting successfully seven opponents of major strength, four of them successively in the second to fifth games on the schedule.

DURING that series, the Panthers lost some games, but it will be recalled that by November the taciturn Scot had welded together a machine fully able to cope with any opponent, which won brilliant victories over West Virginia and Penn

Monday Is Holiday To Celebrate Pitt Wins

Granted permission to declare one day each fall a holiday to celebrate football victories of the season, the Student Council of the University of Pittsburgh has selected Monday, two days after the game with Washington and Jefferson, as the day for the celebration.

Only first and second hour and late afternoon classes for public school teachers will meet on that day regardless of the outcome of the game with Washington and Jefferson.

Harvard-Princeton Crews to Meet In Spring

By Universal Service

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 2.—A partial resumption of athletic relations between Harvard and Princeton, which was broken off last year, has been effected.

This became known yesterday with the announcement that Yale's rowing schedule for 1928 includes a meeting of the 150-pound crews of Yale, Harvard and Princeton at Derby, Conn., May 29.

It is generally understood that the good offices of Yale were used to get Harvard and Princeton to meet on the water.

Pitt Dean May Take Tri-State Post

DEAN E. H. FRIESELL, of the University of Pittsburgh, tendered the commissionership of the Tri-State Conference yesterday, is taking a day or so to think things over before accepting or rejecting the offer.

The Conference made one of the smartest moves in the history of its existence in electing Dean Friesell. The good Dean is just the sort of a man needed to take the Conference in hand and make it into a real organization. Regardless of what may be said to the contrary, things have been running along in a very slip-shot manner for the past year, meetings have been ill attended and evidences of mistrust and suspicion have been seen between league members.

For a time, since the opening of the present football season, it was feared by some that the Conference was due to crack wide open and die a quiet death. The boys seemed unable to get together, and, finally, at a meeting held here in Pittsburgh not so very long ago, one member of the organization told the other three present that unless a radical change took place in the attitude of all the schools at once, that they could count his school out.

The presidents of the various schools were interested in the league and attended the meeting yesterday at which the new commissioner was chosen. It was decided that [illegible] man could be nominated who was a graduate of any of the Conference schools, and that the nominee must be a totally disinterested party—one who would be able to act as a mediator and advisor without the hampering strings of love of alma mater or of previous connection with any one school.

It will be a fine thing for the Conference if Dean Friesell can be prevailed upon to accept the post of commissioner. He is giving the matter serious consideration and will make known his decision in a day or so.

Many Dividend Increases But Also Some Decreases

By B. C. FORBES

NO FEWER than 80 announcements of improved dividend payments came during October, a gain of 11 over last year and of 26 over the same month of 1925.

In 10 months this year favorable dividend changes have totaled 835, compared with 738 a year ago, 568 two years ago and 454 three years ago—a very encouraging showing.

HOWEVER, all dividend changes have not been in an upward direction. Since January 1 there have been chronicled 147 unfavorable announcements. October brought fewer such announcements than any previous month of the year, only 10. Oil companies naturally have figured frequently in the table of disappointing dividends—and nothing has yet occurred to alter the immediate oil outlook.

THE form taken by the cheering dividend announcements made by industrial, public utility and railway companies last month is shown by this table.

OCTOBER	Ind.	P. U.	R. R.
Extra	42	0	2
Initial	8	3	0
Increased	8	2	0
Stock	8	0	3
	70	5	5

THE feature during October was the unusually large number of extra disbursements to stockholders, notwithstanding that not a few corporations have been issuing rather poor statements covering the first three-quarters of the year. Among better-known companies that announced extra payments were:

EXTRA DIVIDENDS.

INCREASED dividend rates were announced by such well known enterprises as National Biscuit, Procter & Gamble, Sherwin-Williams, Ontario Steel Products, Mohawk Mining, Finance Company of America, American District Telegraph.

Stock dividends included 100 per cent by Matson Navigation, the capably-managed company plying between California and Hawaii; 20 per cent by that perpetual fount of profits, American Bank Note; 50 per cent by the Union Stockyards of Omaha; 10 per cent by South Porto Rico Sugar.

Norfolk and Western announced a 3 per cent extra dividend, while Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe again announced ¾ of 1 per cent extra.

THE current year has brought 165 newcomers to the dividend-paying ranks. A very recent development is the appearance of numbers of dividends by investment trusts. Such payments involve duplication, because the income in most instances takes the form of dividends paid by other companies on the shares purchased and held by investment companies. Incidentally, the writer doubts whether the boom in this now fashionable form of investment will last; it seems inevitable that a weeding-out process must come by and by.

MONTHLY comparisons of improved dividend announcements covering the last four years follow:

MIDLAND STEEL REACHES NEW HIGH LEVEL

NEW YORK, Nov. 2—(AP.)—Early irregularity in today's stock market was followed by a period of strength featured by the heavy accumulation of the oil and tobacco shares. Gains of 1 to 5 points were quite common in the early afternoon, but trading showed a marked falling off in volume.

Buying of the oil shares was stimulated by the recent falling off in crude production and reports of unusually heavy gasoline consumption, due to the unseasonably warm weather. Houston and Atlantic refining each advanced about 3 points and Barnsdall, General Asphalt, Marland, Sinclair and several others climbed a point or more.

The demand for the tobaccos probably was inspired by expectations of heavy holiday trade. American Tobacco issues soared about 5 points each to the highest levels since 1920. Midland Steel Products preferred advanced nearly 5 points to the best price in its history. Rumors of an extra cash dividend and the placing of the new common on a $5 annual basis had a sustaining influence on General Motors. Mack Trucks, which was weak yesterday, was depressed further to 97, but rallied close to par when strong buying support appeared in other sections of the list.

Sharp breaks in Gimbel Bros. preferred and General Railway Signal in the early trading had a temporarily depressing effect on speculative sentiment. Nearly a dozen minor specialties, current earnings of which are poor, sank to new low prices for the year.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 2—(AP.)—The cotton market opened firm today at an advance of 15 to 21 points on a continuation of yesterday's late buying and fresh buying for local or commission house account. This was inspired by relatively steady Liverpool cables, talk of frosts in the Southwest and a bullish interpretation of the weekly report of the Weather Bureau on the ground that it indicated a large proportion of the crop had been picked.

December sold up to 20.62c and May to 21.00c in early trading, or 27 to 30 points net higher. The market was within 5 or 6 points of the best at the end of the first hour.

Private cables attributed the steadiness in Liverpool to continental and Bombay buying, with covering on fear of frost in the South.

Business was fairly active at the start, but the market became comparatively quiet later and prices eased off under realizing by recent buyers, which appeared to be combined with some southern selling. December reacted to 20.47c and March to 20.69c, but the market was a point or two up from these figures at midday, with active months showing net advances of about 12 to 14 points.

S. O. La. Gets Fuel Contract.

The Standard Oil Company of Louisiana has been awarded the contract for supplying all the United States shipping board steamers which enter this port with [illegible] barrels of oil a month at [illegible] a barrel at terminal or [illegible] on barges.

Southern Pipe Movement Shrinks.

A statement by the Southern Pipe Line Company, issued in connection with the declaration of a $1 dividend today, says: "Earnings thus far have been in excess of what had been anticipated, due to the fact that a large quantity of Mid-Continent Oil has been moved to the seaboard through our lines. This traffic has ceased for the present and we have no assurance of any future movements of Mid-Continent Oil."

Pressed Steel-Gen. Tank Rumor.

A Chicago dispatch says negotiations for merger of General American Tank Car Corporation, largest producer of tank cars and important producer of other railway equipment, and Pressed Steel Car Company, producer of freight and passenger cars, are under way, it is learned from authoritative sources.

Pullman Earnings Improve.

Inventory Position Good.

Past experience shows that in the past extensive downward movements in security prices have been preceded by tight money, inflation of commodity prices, and abnormally large inventories. Such conditions do not exist at present. On the contrary, the most significant feature of the general business situation is the low stocks of goods in most lines. While the best judges are careful about predictions as to the extent of the present trade reaction, they are virtually unanimous in saying that the groundwork is being laid for prosperous times in the late winter and spring.

I. O. G. Financing Reported.

According to reports from Tulsa, the First Trust and Savings Bank of that city has underwritten the issue of [illegible] share treasury stock of the Independent Oil and Gas Company. The stock was offered to stockholders at [illegible] a share. The stock was selling around [illegible] on the New York Stock Exchange today.

High Grade Bonds Strong.

Probably the most important sustaining factor in the current economic situation is the persistent strength of high grade bonds. In view of the rise in several government issues to record levels at the start of the week, the belief was strengthened that the current reaction in the stock market represented a period of correction rather than the start of a major downward movement. The point is emphasized that bear swings are almost invariably accompanied by declining bond prices.

Watching Argentina's Wheat.

Foreigners are watching conditions in Argentina even more closely than traders on this side, being more directly affected for one thing and also aware of the fact that this is the critical month in the life of the wheat crop there. Australian conditions are not good. Broomhall's agent now estimates that the Commonwealth will not produce over [illegible] bushels of wheat, which would leave only [illegible] bushels for export. Shipments of wheat from Australia so far this season exceed [illegible] bushels.

Pittsburgh Coal Output Expands.

Pittsburgh Coal Company broke all previous records for open shop production in [illegible] former union mines in this district last week when [illegible] tons were loaded compared with previous high of [illegible] tons in the week ended October 8. Average number of men employed last week was [illegible] compared with [illegible] in the week ended October 8.

October Business Mortality.

Insolvencies in October were more numerous and liabilities in excess of September, or of the corresponding month of 1926, R. G. Dun & Co. reporting [illegible] commercial failures for October, involving [illegible]. This contrasts with [illegible] in September for [illegible], and [illegible] in October last year, owing a total of [illegible]. Insolvencies in each month this year have been somewhat more numerous than last year, with heavier indebtedness.

Snyder's Pig Iron Index.

W. P. Snyder & Co. say average sale price of Bessemer pig iron in October was $18, unchanged from September, but $1 a ton under October last year. Basic iron averaged $17, a slight drop from September, but $1 under last year.

Narrow Fluctuations On Local Board

Trading on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange was in moderate volume during the first half of the session today with prices showing only small fractional changes from the quotations prevailing on the close last night. There was less concentration of activity in certain leaders than has been the case for the past week or so.

Early dealings in Lone Star were at figures showing practically no change from the late prices yesterday. A few bids for Arkansas were in the market at 5¾ following the stock's dip yesterday to 5⅛. As yet the street has had no reliable news on the reported deal involving Arkansas and the slip yesterday brought the customary explanation, "deal's off." Likewise any little bulge in the stock usually brings reports that the "deal's on" and the traders meantime hand the stock back and forth amongst themselves on a price spread of about three-quarters of a point.

In the miscellaneous list prices held firm, but there was not much volume. Standard Sanitary sold a little above yesterday's price of 103 and National Fireproofing preferred showed no change. Glass stocks were also unchanged, with American Window Glass Machine preferred changing hands again at 54, the new bottom established on Tuesday.

Penn-Federal Corporation common featured the low-priced division, reflecting the scarcity of the stock around current levels. First sales were unchanged at 7¼, but a few bids for the shares was followed by an upturn to 7⅜ on two subsequent sales.

The firm tone noted in Arkansas Gas in the early session was not maintained. Bids of 5¾ were withdrawn and when the stock did appear in the sales list the figure was 5⅝.

In the late market prices eased off in certain directions. Lone Star sold back to around 54 while a small lot of American Window Glass preferred changed hands at 99½, the first time the stock has dipped under the 100-mark in the current markets. Independent Brewing 6 per cent bonds were soft and showed a loss of three points as compared with the last posted price. Sales today at 70 involved $4,000 par value of the issue.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

We believe that responsible firms should use great care in selecting responsible agents. Only so can home owners get what they have a right to expect. Those who purchase Gulf Oil Burners select them because this oil burner is backed by the experience, skill and technical knowledge of the Gulf Oil Corporation. They have the right to expect proper installation and servicing. In this territory, this announcement is our guarantee.

GRANT GULF OIL BURNER

Don't You Believe It.

You can't heat your home this winter by sprinkling salt on a bird's tail. Consult our Heating Engineers at once. We SELL and INSTALL HOT AIR, HOT WATER and STEAM HEATING PLANTS. Also do all kinds of PLUMBING WORK at money-saving prices. Come in and look through our big showroom. We have what you want and you can pay us monthly. Get our Catalog.

FAMILY ALBUM
ONE EVENING ECLAIRE HAD HER STEADY IN THE PARLOR AND WAS TRYING TO KEEP HIM FROM FALLING ASLEEP. AFTER TELLING HIM ALL THE SCANDAL SHE HAD TO CALL IN THE FAMILY ALBUM——
ONE PICTURE WAS A DEAD RINGER FOR ECLAIRE AND THE REGULAR FELLOW SAID AS MUCH. ECLAIRE TOLD HIM IT WAS MOMMER BEFORE SHE WAS MARRIED, AND THE YOUNG MAN GOT BUSY THINKING——
MOMMER WAS A GOOD, MORAL WOMAN BUT SHE HAD A FACE THAT SUGGESTED DILL PICKLES AND A SHAPE THAT NO STRAIGHT FRONT COULD REGULATE—— THE REGULAR FELLOW SIZED UP THINGS LIKE THIS—IT IS AN 8 TO 1 BET THAT DAUGHTER IN 25 YEARS WILL BE WHAT MOMMER IS TO-DAY——
HELFANT
SO HE JUMPED THROUGH THE WINDOW AND CARRIED THE SASH WITH HIM—— NO ONE EVER SAW HIM ON THAT CORNER AGAIN!
MORAL
IT IS NOT ON RECORD THAT THE FAMILY ALBUM EVER PROVED A HELP!

BUGS BAER Says

MAYOR THOMPSON'S campaign to keep King George on the other side of the sea is bearing fruit like a crabapple tree.

King George is perfectly content to stay on the debit side of the Atlantic and allow the Prince of Wales to do the traveling.

However, Thompson's plan of a gorgeous bonfire of books should not be postponed. There is plenty of material ready for a little educational scorching.

ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER.

Most of these half-baked diplomatic memoirs would be better for a trifle more oven.

Professor Eliot's five-foot shelf is already taking up too much room in the attic.

A match would be equivalent to a college education when applied to Margot Asquith's volume of state's evidence. But Thompson wouldn't get very far trying to burn one of Elinor Glyn's fireproof scenarios.

Thompson is the first educator who ever handed out information on a shovel. He is unique in municipal circles and establishes a record by creating the public post of official stoker in a library.

Every time the alarm rings now in Illinois the book worms wriggle down the fire escapes. They'd be safer in Chestnuts on Halloween.

Cook books, telephone books and Col. House's letters of a silent gossiper would be nice, brittle shavings for the start of the big fire.

It would also give Chicago a chance to get even with Mrs. O'Leary's cow, for all of her children are now the calfskin covers on many a foolish book.

When the fire is blazing happily Thompson could toss on garden hints and the bartender's guide.

How to play backgammon and the ehtical culture of goldfish could be tossed on with the dictionary and how to become a midget.

There are many books which would make a delicious bonfire and we hope that Thompson burns them all. Like Omar at the library of Alexandria, Thompson can burn everything except the municipal budget and the Child's Book of Knowledge, two books necessary for the welfare and future of a Chicago Mayor.

ON THE CURE FOR JEALOUSY

SOME men feel JEALOUS,
And yet MANAGE to HIDE it SUCCESSFULLY from
The girls they LOVE;
But there are OTHER men
WHO, when this GREEN-EYED Monster gets HOLD of them, SHOW it,
And EITHER way, the GIRL is SELDOM satisfied,
For, if her lover FAILS to SHOW any signs of JEALOUSY, she THINKS he is COLD, and if he RAVES and STORMS she finally Gets BORED.
A JEALOUS man is much To be PITIED, for Jealousy is born of FEAR,
And FEEDS on SUSPICION,
And, if he is VERY JEALOUS he always looks RIDICULOUS.
Of course, if the MAN has Good REASON for jealousy, OTHER Men will SYMPATHIZE with Him, BUT if he has NO Reason at ALL, they STILL Think he is MAD.
JEALOUSY is a DISEASE
Caught from the DEVIL himself,
And only LOVE in large
DRAUGHTS can CURE it.

Praise the Lord?

We Well May.

"I will praise the Lord, for I am fearfully and wonderfully made."

As the young run, jump, wrestle, throw or kick the ball, they little realize what marvelous machines they are, balanced on two feet, maintaining their balance with the aid of a little "carpenter's level," a drop of oil in a chamber in each ear.

They little know what force they are using in the hurdle race, the onehundred-yard dash, or the long, dreary marathon.

Professor A. V. Hill, an English student of man's construction, who won the Nobel Prize five years ago, says we have about realized the LIMIT of athletic possibilities.

Men that break the record hereafter, in the one hundred-yard dash for instance, will break it by hundredths, not tenths, of a second. Man's highest speed is slow compared with that of the flying machine going 300 miles an hour. But it is marvelous when you consider that man runs standing up, pushed by his feet, keeping balance as they hurl him forward, one foot pushing, then the other.

When Charles W. Paddock ran one hundred yards in 9 5-10 seconds he was running at the rate of 24½ miles an hour, faster than the early locomotives could go.

Professor Hill thinks that is pretty near the limit.

The muscles are simply servants waiting for orders that come through the nerves.

When a man is "set" for a one hundred-yard dash, he can't start until his brain has heard the pistol or the word "Go." And, even with the best co-ordinated nerves, mind and muscles, it takes one-tenth of a second for the brain to send the word "Go" down the spinal cord, to the muscles of the legs and feet. There is one-tenth of a second lost before the athlete starts.

A sprinter running one hundred yards in ten seconds uses nine horsepower of energy.

That the strength of nine horses can be reserved and actually used in ten seconds, by the frail body of a one hundred and thirty-pound man, is enough to make anybody "praise the Lord" for giving us such "fearfully and wonderfully made" bodies to live in.

Professor Hill thinks we have about reached the limit of speed, because, the faster we go, the more "lactic acid, a product of muscular fatigue," is manufactured in our muscles.

A sprinter at full speed manufactures three or four grams of lactic acid a second. Four ounces of it would be enough poison to stop the athlete absolutely.

Remember, also, that in running most of the energy is used in eternal friction of the muscles. Only a small part is actually used to move the body forward.

In long distance running much depends on the runner's "oxygen-borrowing capacity."

Every muscle as it works must have oxygen. This can be stored up in the well-regulated body, "borrowed" for the violent effort, as Professor Hill puts it, then paid back later.

A running athlete depends almost entirely on borrowed oxygen, breathing makes little difference.

The greatest amount of oxygen that a runner can take in is about 3½ quarts a minute, says Professor Hill. The maximum amount that he can store up in his system is 13 quarts. So that in a short race the most oxygen he can hope for is 16½ quarts. Running at full speed, he can use all that up in 300 yards. Man is certainly a very interesting machine.

But Professor Hill may be mistaken when he says that we have about reached the maximum of speed.

He overlooks evolution, the possibility of increased strength of tendons and bone.

A sprinter starting puts a terrific strain on his ankles, insteps and tendons.

In the British Natural History Museum they show you a bone taken from the front leg of a race horse, cut crosswise. It looks like a piece of solid ivory. They show you a similar bone taken from the front leg of a cart horse, cut crosswise. Full of air holes, it looks like a piece of sponge.

There is no knowing what evolution may develop, as we fly through the clouds, explore the bottom of the ocean, get rid of our heavy stomachs, of superfluous muscles, that we don't need, and develop better stomachs and better muscles.

If an athlete had the ability of a flea, he could jump over a skyscraper. Why shouldn't evolution in time give man the same power that it has given to the flea in jumping, or the power that is given to the ant in carrying loads?

Evolution MIGHT produce men jumping across the widest rivers, lifting up and carrying elephants with ease. But we are not headed in THAT direction.

The increased strength is more apt to come in the brain, WHERE IT IS NEEDED. A big, well-developed brain in a small body would be the ideal.

A prize-fighter in a recent story says that he "admires the young lady because her body has five more curves than a watch spring."

The man of the future may be satisfied with only one curve, and that a small one.

Death of A. J. Kelly, Jr., Removes Man of Service

Pittsburgh has lost a citizen of the highest type in the death of A. J. Kelly, Jr., who passed from this life in a moment of service to the community. Service. That is the way he had expended his vital energy during his mortal career. Doing—always doing. And so he died—doing. He was actually engaged in "boosting" the plan of the Flood Commission when Death overtook him.

As a real estate man, Mr. Kelly's activities throughout nearly 50 years of his life had much to do with the physical development of Pittsburgh. His clear vision enabled many projects to reach successful termination. His knowledge of realty values made him sought in important appraisals. His position as a leading banker was that of a capable, faithful guardian of trust imposed in him as well as shaping the financial destinies of many enterprises. As a member of Pittsburgh's first "small council" he was a figure in making the deliberations of that body conspicuous for the good of the community.

Mr. Kelly really was a man of affairs—many affairs—among which those of his city always had his willing and earnest assistance. Men who knew him—and they were numerous in all walks of life—realize that his departure is a loss Pittsburgh will find to be very great.

Garrett P Serviss Says:

The Human Maze

MORE interesting in many ways than his defense of the Darwinian idea of man's ape-relationship is Prof. Arthur Keith's account, in his celebrated address to the British Association, of the astonishing complexity of related forms that marks the evolution of human kind. It is not unimportant to note that in the Biblical story of man's early career, there shine dimly forth, out of the obscurity surrounding Adam, after his expulsion from Paradise, various indications and hints of the existence in the world at that time of human races that had never been included in the Edenic scheme.

That these should have been real men and women, treating, on a purely human footing, with Adam's own descendants, and even intermarrying with them, is a mystery for the Fundamentalists to clear up. What was the Land of Nod, and whence came its inhabitants? If this question had to be answered by the Darwinians they would be at no loss for suggestive information on the subject. They have evidence that the world, perhaps a million years before the date ascribed to the Garden of Eden tragedy, was inhabited by early human races, which had already become widely differentiated.

Read this passage from Prof. Keith's address, in which he made no attempt to conceal any early mistakes of the evolutionists:

"Our older and discarded conception of man's transformation was depicted in that well-known diagram which showed a single file of skeletons, the gibbon at one end and man at the other." (All attendants at popular lectures will remember the lantern slide showing that suggestive file—I used to use it myself.) "In our original simplicity we expected, as we traced man backwards in time, that we should encounter a graded series of fossil forms—a series which would carry him in a straight line toward an anthropoid ancestor.

"We should never have made this initial mistake if we had remembered that the guide to the world of the past is the world of the present. In our times man is represented not by one but by many and diverse races—black, brown, yellow and white; some of these are rapidly expanding, others are as rapidly disappearing. Our searches have shown that in remote times the world was peopled, sparsely it is true, with races showing even a greater diversity than those of today, and that already the same process of replacement was at work. To unravel man's pedigree we have to thread our way not along the links of a chain but through the meshes of a complicated network."

"As we go backward in time," says Keith, "we discover that mankind becomes broken up, not into separate races as in the world of today, but into numerous and separate species. When we go into a still more remote past they become so unlike that we have to regard them not as belonging to separate species but to different genera. It is amongst this welter of extinct fossil forms which strew the ancient world that we have to trace the zigzag line of man's descent."

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

"Well Done!"

TRUE, all blame or reproof is not cruelly meant, though men flinch at the weight of a word, and the critic may speak with a kindly intent when his speech is as sharp as a sword. There is tonic, sometimes, in the turn of a phrase that can rouse men from dangerous spells, and can set their steps back into purposeful ways by the effort its candor compels. But the best aid of all that a toiler can find from day's dawn till the setting of sun comes when someone cries out, in a voice clear and kind, just this message: "Well done, friend, well done!" How it lightens the way and it brightens the day, how it helps in the race to be run, when ever the tumult one hears a voice say: "Well done, friend, your task is well done!"

Tales that are Told

Candid

IT WAS a sad day in the Pipeon household. The housemaid had given notice, making the third girl in two months who had declined to stay. Mrs. Pipeon, almost in tears, was talking the matter over with the cook.

"But what the girls of today can be thinking of, I'm sure I don't know!" she said. "Always changing from one place to another; never satisfied! Leaving to better herself, she told me! Such nonsense! How does she think she is going to get a better place than this, I should like to know?"

The cook looked sympathetic.

"And that's what I tell 'em all, ma'am. 'Goin' to better yourself, are you?' I says to 'em. 'And 'ow do you know that?' I says. 'And what,' I says, 'do you know about the place you're a-goin' to? Not a thing! Of course, you may be better off, but you may just as likely be goin' from bad to worse!' That's what I tells 'em all. Out of the frying pan into the fire, I calls it. But it don't make no difference."

No Protest Heard

A MAN was persuaded to buy an excellent parrot. It had traveled far and could jabber in several foreign languages. He ordered it to be sent home.

That same day his wife had ordered a chicken for dinner. In leaving the house she said to the cook: "Mary, there's a bird coming for dinner. Wring its neck and have it cooked for Mr. Richards when he gets home."

Unfortunately the parrot arrived first, and Mary followed instructions. At dinner it was duly served.

"What's this?" exclaimed Mr. Richards.

Mary told him.

"But for goodness' sake, Mary," he said, "this is awful. That bird could speak seven languages."

"Then why didn't it say something?" asked Mary.

"Wasn't that a fine sermon?" said one woman admirer to her companion.

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Flirtatious gentlemen seeking a personal meeting with soft-voiced telephone girls in New York are turned away with "Sorry, I cannot tell you my name, but I can give you my number." This is a part of the training given by the company to uphold the morale.

Telephone girls, especially those attached to hotels, have in innumerable instances contracted extremely fortunate marriage. There is somehow a subtle glamor about them for lonely visitors. As much so as among those who kick high in the first row of the chorus.

Several hotels employ girls for the switchboard only with the written agreement they will not marry for two years. It is one of the customs of men who grow tired of looking at the four walls of their hotel room to engage in conversation with a telephone girl.

Out of this often grows a sentimental attachment—and telephone service becomes impaired. Telephone girls do not come by their soothing voices naturally. They undergo intensive training to acquire this modulated manner of conversation.

There are four training schools in Greater New York where etiquette and enunciation are taught as a prelude to mastering the dummy switchboards. If a voice is harsh it is softened and the cheery inflection we all know so well is instilled.

Days are spent in pronouncing numbers from one to ten. Nine is the worst stumbler. It is pronounced "Nigh-own" to keep it from being confused with five. And to prevent close-mouthed speech, candidates must hold their teeth apart and recite:

"The cold I caught upon the boat
Has settled in my nose and throat."

The training sometimes lasts six months. The apt are quickly placed. The idea is implanted that the public is always right—which it isn't, of course. But the result is America has the best telephone service in the world.

One of Broadway's famous hotels has 47 dining rooms. Yet the proprietor is said to have never eaten in one of them. Many New York hotel proprietors have their homes in the country. Waiters say the most difficult patrons to serve are innkeepers. And that they are extremely modest in tipping.

The spirit of bravado is displayed to the mob of Broadway short change artists in a challenge over a restaurant cashier's cage, reading: "Try to short change me." There are men who make a living short changing cashiers. That is why cashiers are a trifle suspicious when you attempt to engage them in conversation while paying the check. The shortages come out of their salaries. Some cashiers, it might be added, are rather clever themselves at the ancient racket and in questionable places work for nothing.

The trick of the short changer is to confuse you. After receiving his change he suddenly wants another bill changed and he is so adroit in mixing you up with his conversation he usually comes out a winner. And if he is caught he can plead an innocent mistake and get away with it. It is the one Broadway racket that seldom ends in arrest.

New York had a bumper crop of heroes during the past year. And a young man who sends me the lyrics of a ditty, entitled: "I Never Did Anything But I Want a Parade" may find a response in Tin Pan alley.

And a gentleman from Erie, Pa., writes me that on his last visit to the metropolis he paid $35 for a sight-seeing wagon in which he was the lone passenger and had the time of his life. There is an idea there worthy of serious thought to those who want to see the town alone—provided you have the $35.

Take Off the Blinders

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

Sir Oliver Lodge the other day said: "Science pursues a narrow road in search of truth, looking neither to the right nor the left. Well, it will soon have to take its blinkers off. The roads are not the whole universe. There is a good deal of ground in between. It looks at present like a jungle and thicket—uncivilized. Well, we will have to civilize it."

The fault to which Sir Oliver refers is not confined to scientists, although it is common among them. A man may look so intently at the thing upon which his attention is fixed that he fails to see important things about him to which he gives no heed.

Some of the most important things of life come unexpectedly. Some of our most vital events are not those toward which we labored.

A man should keep his eyes and be able to see things "out of the tail of his eye."

The best things that ever happened to us have not been those things that we so arduously searched for, but things which have bumped into us unexpectedly.

It is all right to pursue one subject with concentration, but we should not concentrate so much that we do not see other things.

Many a man has been so busy with his trade or calling that he has failed to recognize opportunities that thrust themselves upon him.

Many a religionist has been so occupied with his faith that he has taken in none of the indubitable facts that surround him.

So, also, some scientists pursue their duty so fixedly that they fail to see the spiritual realities that occur about them.

A concentrated mind is a good thing, but it should also be an alert mind. We should press forward toward the goal in view, but we should be ready to jump at prizes that lie by the roadside.

There is such a thing as too much concentration.

Men centering all their attention upon the pursuit of wealth do not see the little opportunities for happiness that lie along their path day by day. Women are so intent upon gaining some goal which they think important that they miss other blessings which they might have by the way for the taking.

Let us devote all our attention to our business in hand, but let us remember that there are other things in this world than the thing upon which we have set our heart and that sometimes these other things are quite as important as our chosen object.

Who's to Blame

HAVE affairs reached a stage in your home where heated arguments start all too easily?

Are disagreements becoming too frequent?

Are you too prone to challenge statements which in the past you would have let go by?

Can you analyze just how this has come about?

Is it that you have reached a point where you want your opinion to prevail in all matters?

If a member of your family dares to differ with you, do you become aroused and soon reach the anger point?

Are you unwilling to have your authority questioned?

Do you demand the final word and want what you say to "go"?

And sometimes when you have found you were mistaken, you still stuck to your position, didn't you?

Did it gain for you the respect of the members of your family?

THE LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON

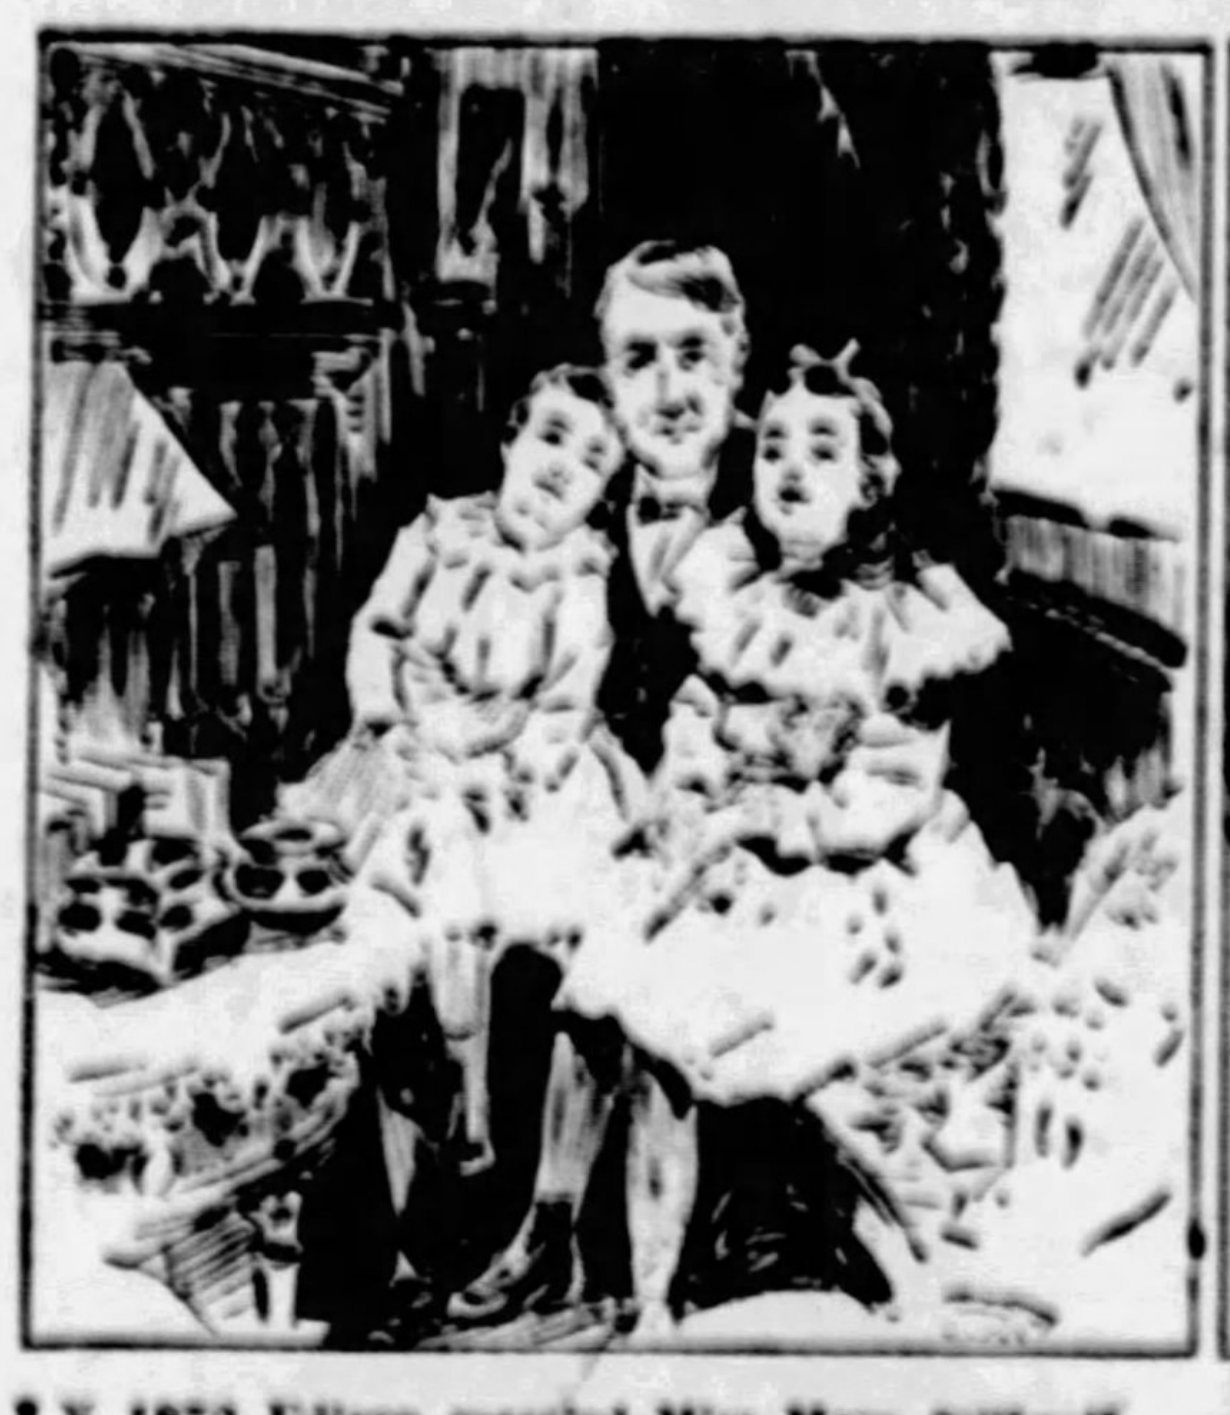
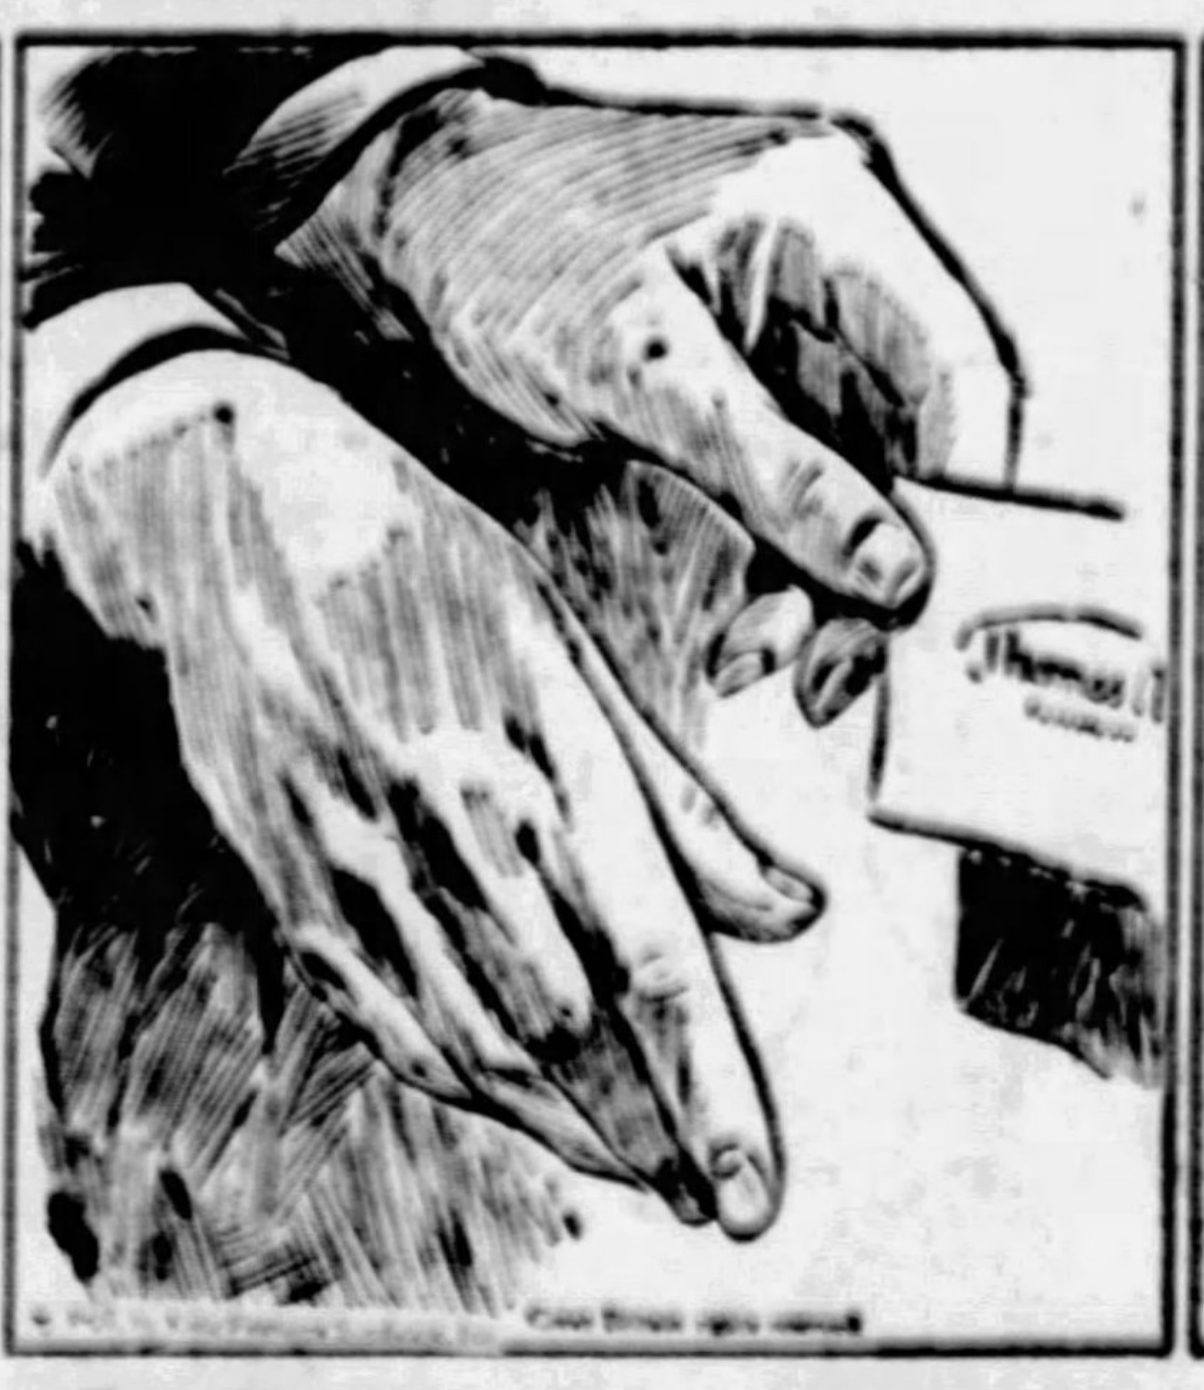
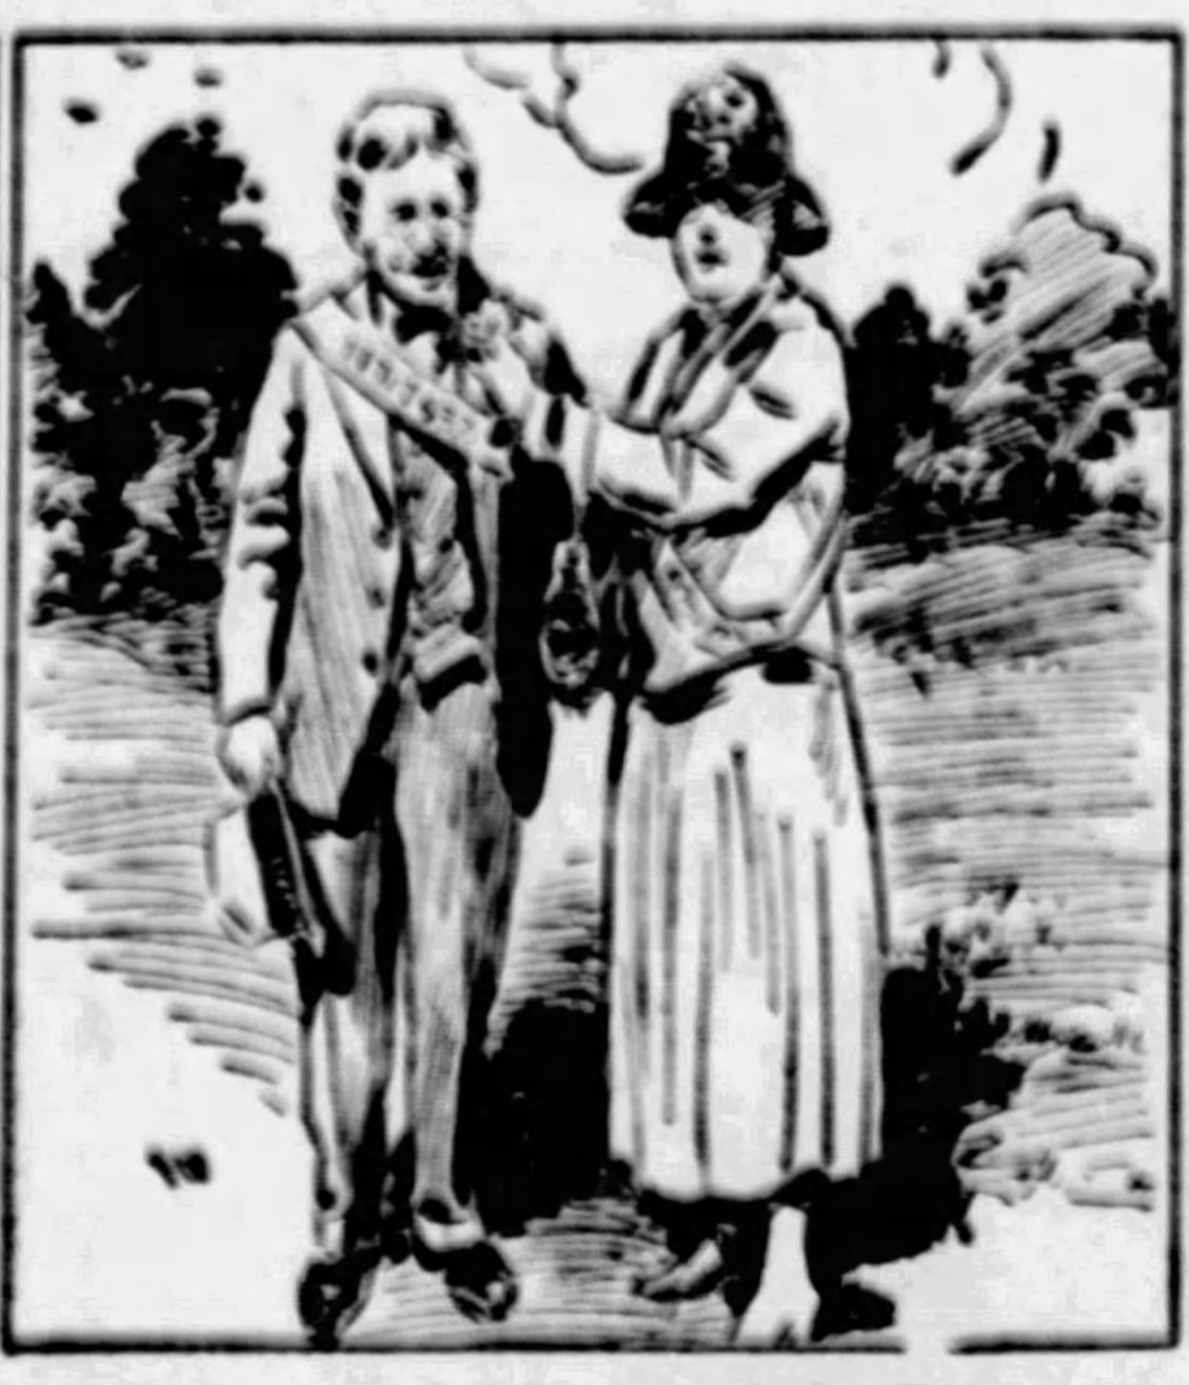
Text by Arthur J. Palmer
Drawings by Frank Kuchenmeister



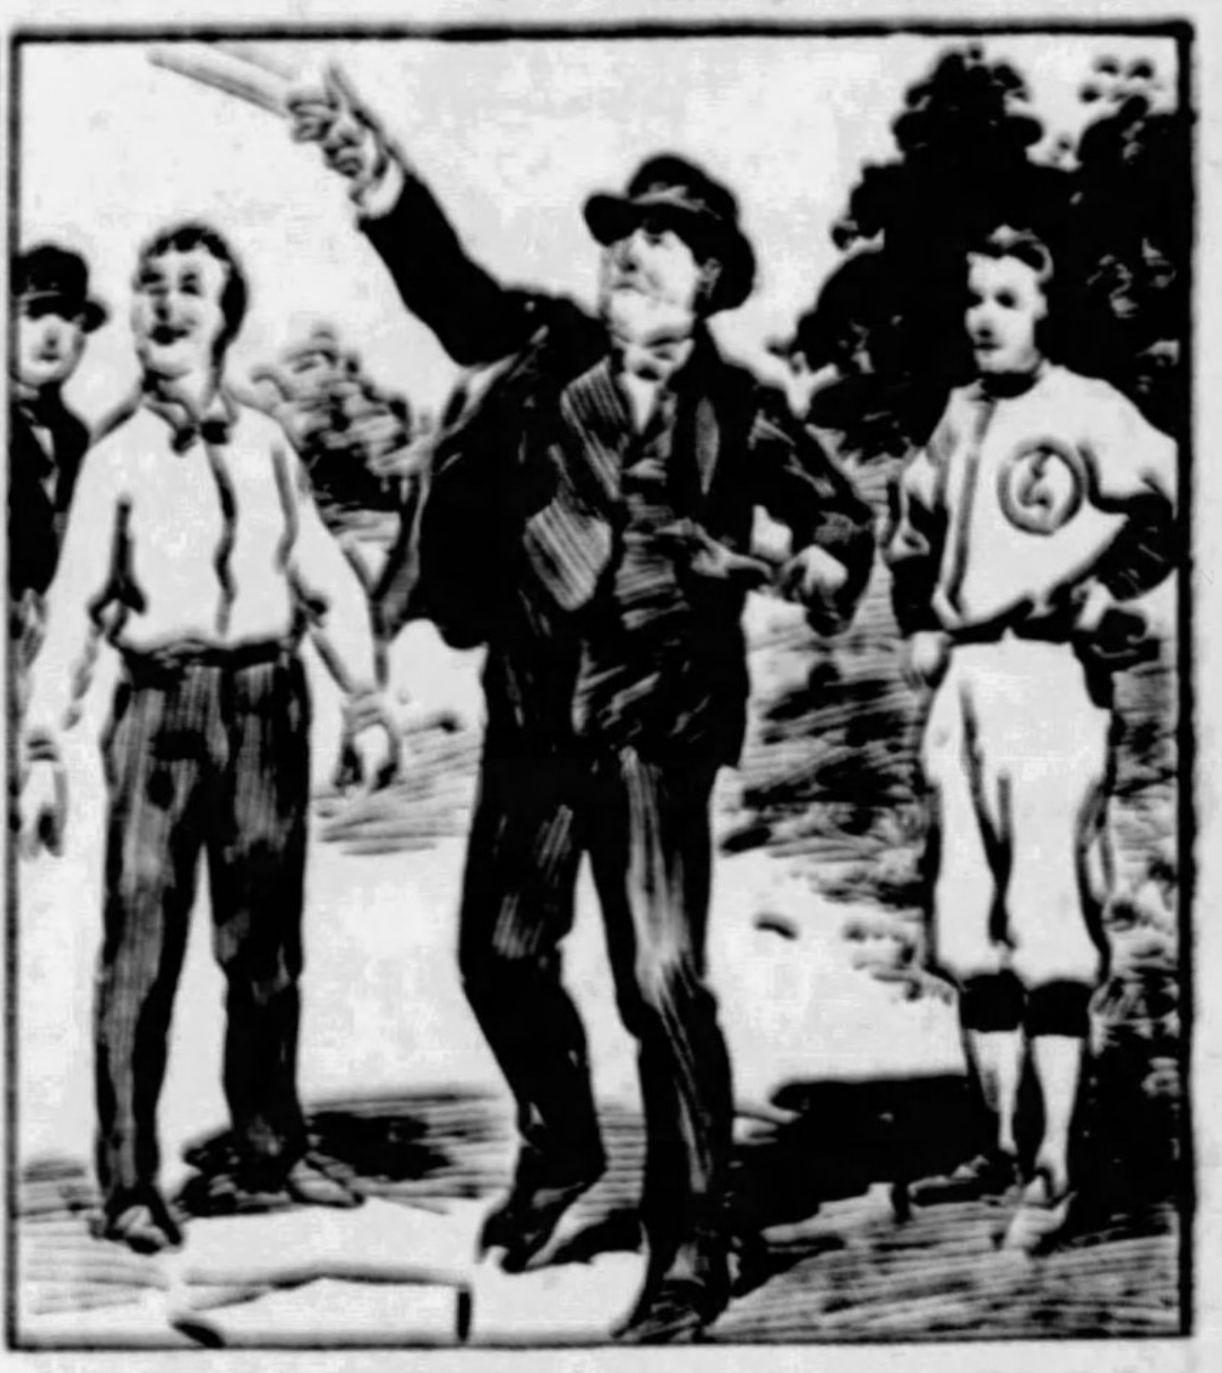
IN 1873 Edison married Miss Mary Stillwell, who died in 1884, leaving three children—Thomas Alva, William Leslie and Marion Estelle. In the old laboratory days Thomas Alva and Marion Estelle were familiarly known by the telegraphic term, "dot and dash." The drawing shows "Dot" and "Dash" about 1880.



"EDISON'S hands" said an expert on character reading, "are worth a great deal of watching. They are not muscular hands at all, but long and hollow backed. The hands of the dreamer, the idealist, the man of imagination." They are the fine "tools" that carry out the orders of the master mind.



AT the annual field day of the Edison employes, September 17, 1927, a feature of the day was the parade of Edison "Old Timers." One hundred and four employes who had been in service 25 years or more were in line. Mrs. Edison decorated William H. Meadowcroft, dean of the veterans.



EDISON attends few "affairs" of any kind, but there is one which he rarely misses, and that is Edison field day. He enters thoroughly into the spirit of the day and sometimes into its activities, at least to the extent of throwing out the baseball for the annual inter-departmental game.
